October Pork Month Highlights Environmental Awareness

Producer Creates Quality Product, Protects Environment

For his efforts in promoting land stewardship while overseeing profitable hog enterprises, Jerry Hostetter of Hostetter Swine Management Systems, Denver, left, was honored with this year's Environmental Stewardship Award, eastern region, under a program sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council and related industries. An employee, Scott Bailey, right, won the Pork All-American Award in June this year.

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — If you look at it one way, it could be considered a "preemptive" strike.

That "strike" is the culmination of years planning, building, managing, and ultimately reaping the rewards of good environmental stewardship.

And according to one large-scale hog facilities manager, all of it is an effort to ward off attacks by environmental groups, those who are opposed to concentrated animal agriculture, and myths that certain types of ag companies are too "big business" and could care less about environmental stewardship.

For his efforts in promoting land stewardship while overseeing profitable hog enterprises, Jerry Hostetter of Hostetter Swine Management Systems, Denver, was honored with this year's Environmental Stewardship Award, eastern region, under a program sponsored by the National Pork Producers Council and related industries.

Hostetter, who manages 13,000 sows in eight different locations throughout the state, recently spoke to Lancaster Farming about the challenges the hog industry faces in farming profitably while helping to protect the environment.

A large part of environmental protection involved the installation, in 1992, of one of the first lined manure lagoon systems on Swatara Swine, a 1,400-sow farrow-to-feeder pig farm in Lebanon County, managed by Hostetter. Since then, other farms in the industry have used a liner system to protect groundwater and to help improve the management of nutrients on the farms.

A big reason for installing the liner system, Hostetter said, was a legal one.

He said, "When you look at how legally liable you are from manure contamination of leaks or anything else, you try to look at that and say, how do you limit it? And I think you limit your exposure by doing more than the standard."

State Recognizes 100,000th Acre In Farmland Preservation

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — On a 1,350-acre family farm in the southeast region of the Pennsylvania state governmental and agricultural leadership on Tuesday recognized the milestone of breaking the 100,000th acre mark in farmland preservation.

In addition, Gov. Tom Ridge signed an executive order that calls for continued cooperation between state and local agencies to protect farmland through the state's farmland preservation program, which secures development rights on that property.

Ridge effectively said that his order is to direct state agencies to actively seek ways to preserve the state's prime agricultural land, rather than to take a passive role.

According to a news release, "The order provides a common definition of primary agricultural land and a common vision to focus on the importance of preserving the state's valuable farmlands."

Ridge said that he signed the executive order to, "... enjoin all state agencies to join to protect farmland."

He said that the state "... need(s) a common vision. That vision must focus on preserving as much" farmland as possible.

The event was held on the farm of the Willard Setzer family, a farming operation started in 1953 that now includes a third generation living and working there.

The location was selected because, when the family sold the development rights on a 273-acre tract of the farm to Northampton County for $1,093,247, the acreage pushed the state total over the 100,000 acre mark.

Because of the overcast conditions, two large white tents were erected in a hay field next to corn fields, off a field lane behind the main farm house and buildings.

In one tent a platform and podium with the state seal was setup with folding chair for attendees. Some stood at the rear of the tent during ceremonies.

In the other large tent was the Nazareth Area High School Blue Eagle Marching Band, which performed several pieces prior to the arrival of Gov. Ridge, who was slightly behind schedule, and apologized.

A number of news reporters from newspapers, radio and television attended the event.

Also present in the audience were the state FFA leaders, who

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The local tax reform referendum, land uses, the Clean Air Act, high health insurance rates, and tractor trailer regulations are a few of the nearly 90 topics to be discussed at the upcoming Pennsylvania State Grange Session, Oct. 25-29 in Reading.

The 1997 session marks the 125th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Leaders, 4-H'ers Receive Achievement Recognition

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "Winning is nice. But in life, we fail more than we succeed," Gerald Boyd said to fellow 4-H'ers and leaders at the 4-H Recognition Night at Bent Creek Country Club Thursday night.

But 18-year-old Gerald achieved the ultimate win when he received the Superior Achievement Award. The annual award is given to the most outstanding 4-H'er who best achieves all-around growth in project skills, leadership abilities, improvement in life skills, decision-making, citizenship, participation in club, county, regional, state, and national 4-H events, and in school and community

During a standing ovation for Gerald, he expressed emotional gratitude for being a recipient of the award initiated 14 years ago by his grandparents, the late Elmer L. and Pauline E. Boyd. The award is a legacy of the Boyd family, who recognized the positive influence of 4-H that permeates the attitudes of participants throughout life.

Gerald told of joining 4-H 11 years ago and how, at first, he was most thrilled with the ribbons he won in showing hogs and dairy cattle. In his fifth year of 4-H involvement, the 4-H county agent challenged him to record the experiences he gained, the things he learned, and the emotions he felt when charting his progress.

Gerald Boyd, seated, won the Superior Achievement Award. Kneeling are a sister Sarah and a cousin Brian. Parents Deb and Kerry Boyd are on either side. At right,

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grains and soybean bids were slightly higher after yesterday's lower close. Some overnight wheat and corn orders helped to boost bids but the major strengthening factor was USDA's bullish stocks report. Ending stock figures for corn were cut to 781 million bushels and soybeans fell to a tight 270 million bushels. Gains were limited, however, by active harvest and favorable weather. Wheat bids were supported by higher corn and soybean bids. Wheat steady to 5 cents higher. Corn 2 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 5 to 8 cents higher. Soybeans narrowly mixed, 1 cent higher to 1 cent lower.

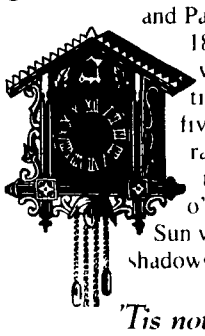
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

OCTOBER 20-26, 1997

ST. CRISPIN, OCTOBER 25.

HIGH TIME?

Let your clocks "fall back " Daylight Saving Time ends at 2 00 A M on October 26 In the United States, we owe our four time zones to the development of the great east-west railroads Eastern, Central, Mountain, and Pacific times came into national use in 1883, although the limits of the zones were not fixed until 1918 Eastern time is behind Greenwich time by five hours Before the railroads made rapid transit possible, simple "local time" was practical, where it was 12 o'clock noon in any region when the Sun was at its highest point in the sky and shadows were cast in a north-south line



'Tis not enough to run well, unless you set out in due time.

– French proverb

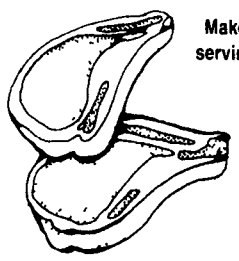
TIP OF THE WEEK

There's no use to "save time" if you're only going to use it to do more of what you'd like to do less of.

QUICK AND JUICY PORK CHOPS

4 lean, thick pork chops
4 'Granny Smith' apples, peeled and sliced
4 tablespoons brown sugar
dash apple cider vinegar
salt and pepper, to taste

Brown pork chops on both sides, about a minute per side Place chops in a heat-proof dish and cover with apple slices and brown sugar Sprinkle with vinegar, salt, and pepper Cover and simmer over medium heat about 30 minutes, or until pork shows no pink in the middle



Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

The day of the month on which the first snow falls gives the number of storms that the winter will bring

The number of fogs in autumn tells the number of snows in winter.

OPINION

Swine Producers, Take Heed — It's Pork Month

The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) reminds us that one of the most important issues facing the swine industry is environmental quality maintenance.

Through the NPPC, producers can sign up with the Environmental Quality Assurance Program to ensure that their farm is environmentally safe, their practices environmentally friendly.

All this is in an effort to stem a rising tide of producer litigation and antagonism by the general public against large commercial enterprises — which means many of you.

Producers can follow an example of one large-scale confinement operator, headquartered in Denver, who is able to turn a profit while protecting the environment. It can be done.

It will cost, initially — but the payoffs in terms of securing a livelihood may, in the end, far outweigh the costs.

In this issue, a producer, Jerry Hostetter of Hostetter Management Company in Denver, was profiled. On his operations, money was invested years ago to promote environmental quality assurance. Producers can't avoid the issue anymore. Many already have begun their own programs.

But for many producers without $1 million facilities, little steps can be taken to protect the environment. To find out what, contact the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council representative, Dr. Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, who helps administer the quality assurance program. He can be reached at (814) 863-3671.

For Hostetter, building the programs took time. Many came as a result of an incident years ago, well-known throughout the industry, in North Carolina, when a lagoon spilled thousands of gallons of slurry, contaminating creeks and groundwater. Since then, the industry has been on the alert to protect themselves from hurtful litigation.

The North Carolina incident "made it out to be that we're all bad people — we're just hoodlums that are just trying to make all the money we can and we don't really care about what we leave behind," said Hostetter. But in fact, he said, "we're producing food, we're trying to provide good jobs, good families, and have good people around us." What better time to promote environmental assurance than during October, national pork month?

Now Is The Time

To Manage Dry Cows

Your dry cow program is very important, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension dairy agent. It sets the stage for the next lactation.

A number of things may happen that will affect your dry cow's performance.

They may put on too much flesh from consuming too much corn silage or grain. They may consume too much calcium from being fed too much alfalfa. Their vitamin and mineral levels may be depleted due to inadequate supplements or they have been forced to draw upon their body reserves due to being underfed.

If these things are allowed to occur, these dry cows will probably get a sluggish start in their next lactation.

To Prevent Dairy Production Problems

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension dairy agent, reminds us that improperly managed dry cows will probably have problems in their next lactation.

They will have more calving difficulties. Appetites will be sluggish. They will lose flesh at a more rapid rate and may become ketotic. They might even get a twisted stomach, especially if forage intakes are low.

These cows will not peak well and sustain good levels of production because they are in a negative energy balance.

Conception rates will also be low. This increases the days open.

As a result, the herd becomes stale, production drops and cows put on too much flesh. Thus, starting the cycle to repeat itself.

All of this points to the importance of a good dry cow program, proper ration balancing, and an effective vaccination program, even when times are tight.

To Display SMV Signs

It has been 34 years since the slow moving vehicle (SMV) sign for the back of farm equipment was introduced. Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension agronomy agent, reminds us the sign improves safety because it reflects light back at vehicles approaching from the rear.

Because of its shape, anyone approaching from behind sees the reflected light and knows the shape means it is on a slow-moving vehicle.

Since its introduction, the SMV sign has helped avoid countless accidents.

Later this year, improved SMV signs will be introduced.

While the emblem shape will stay the same, the border will reflect light back at the source. This will make it much easier for approaching motorists to see.

Accidents are avoidable. On roads with fast-moving traffic, making any slow-moving vehicle visible and identifiable is critical to others. Also, when traveling at night, make sure you have lights installed on equipment, buggies, bicycles, etc.

A few dollars invested in lights and SMV signs will increase your safety.

Remember, safety is profitable. Be seen on the road and not in the hospital.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Vision is not seeing things as they are, but as they will be."

Editor:

Pennsylvania, literally Penn's Woods, is blessed with almost 17 million acres of forests.

That is 59 percent of the total state area. More than 90 percent of Pennsylvania's forests are commercial timberland which can be managed to grow and harvest trees on a sustainable basis.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE HANDWRITING ON YOUR WALL

October 19, 1997

Background Scripture:
Daniel 5
Devotional Reading:
Daniel 7:1-3, 15-18

Is there anything so intimidating as the arrogance of power? Hitler receiving bouquets of flowers from German children while his "final solution" murders millions of Jews and others. Stalin exalting the working man while condemning to death millions of Russian peasants. Saddam thumbing his nose at the United Nations and professing his innocence to the people of Iraq. Yet, there is a handwriting on the wall for each of these men.

Power is more intoxicating than alcohol. Tyrants rarely "sober up." Drunks do enough damage in this world, but power-inebriated despots seem, as Shakespeare says, to "bestride the narrow world like a Collosus; and we petty men walk under his huge legs, and peep about to find ourselves dishonorable graves."

I am glad that I have lived long enough to see despots fail and fall by the sheer weight of God's judgment — Stalin, Hitler and so many others who, at one time, made the earth tremble with their power. Yet, who can deny that, when men such as these are in power, they seem all-powerful? Who among them ever see the handwriting on the wall — until it is too late.

A SIP OF POWER

However, people do not have to be all-powerful to be drunk with it. Even people like us can become arrogant with a little bit of power. Whenever we think we have something someone else needs and wants, we have power to deny or give it. And that power can lead us to be arrogant — which comes the Latin arrogare, "to claim for one's self" and eventuates in "overbearing" behavior. Are you ever overbearing?

So "arrogance" suggests being carried away by our own perceptions of power. This was evident in the behavior of 'King Belshezzar, who succeeded Nebuchadnezzar. At a great feast celebrating his power, Belshezzar had brought out the sacred vessels Nebuchadnezzar had looted from the temple of Jerusalem and now, in an act of heady arrogance, had them used as common table implements.

But while "They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold and silver, bronze, iron, wood and stone," something happened to shake this arrogant man to his foundations. "Immediately the fingers of a man's hand appeared and wrote on the plaster of the wall of the King's palace....and the king saw the hand as it wrote" (5:4,5). I don't know what the color of arrogance is, but the writer tells us; "Then the King's color changed, and his thoughts alarmed him; his limbs gave way, and his knees knocked together."

FOUND WANTING

Although he saw the handwriting on the wall, he did not understand the message and called in a panic for his advisors to find someone who could read the message. That's where Daniel comes in. He saw the handwriting on the wall as God's message of judgment that would dwarf the King's arrogance: "MENE, God has numbered the days of your kingdom and brought it to an end; TEKEL, you have been weighed in the balances and found wanting; PERES, your kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians" (5:26-28).

The message varies from person to person, but there is handwriting on the wall for each of us and we do not have to be Daniels to understand what God is saying to us. Our days are numbered too, and we will be judged and our possessions will be taken from us.

So how reads the handwriting on your wall?

This understanding opened up a whole new way of looking at success and failure for Gerald. Now a college student at Millersville University, Gerald is reaping the benefits of skills he learned through multi-varied participation in 4-H activities.

In addition to showing livestock, Gerald's most notable achievements were in being a Poland exchange student and a part of the champion 4-H livestock judging team that traveled the East Coast.

"This odyssey is part of my 4-H story and could become the dream of every 4-H'er in this room," Gerald said. "4-H is a wonderful opportunity for parents and youth. Reach for the stars, set goals high, and see how 4-H offers a world of opportunity."

In addition, Gerald also won a $500 scholarship. Other scholarship winners were Sara Strickler, $300, and Jeff Lefever, $200.

Six 4-H'ers participated in talent competition throughout the evening. Elisa Ranck received first place for playing the harp, Ryan Mast second place for a solo, and Crystal Glick third place for performing an Irish dance. In addition Rachelle Newcomer and Kevin Hoober performed piano solos and Karen Craven and Amy Kirker performed a flute duet.

Recognition was given to numerous 4-H'ers and leaders for outstanding involvement in the 4-H program.

Pa. State Grange

bers from around Pennsylvania will gather at the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Reading for the state convention where new policies are discussed and voted on by delegates. The session is being hosted by the 12 Granges in Berks County.

"The Grange is a grass-roots organization which gets its policies from the local Granges in the form of resolutions," said Pennsylvania State Grange Master (president) Bill Steel.

"Over the years the Grange has successfully lobbied for such issues as rural mail delivery, establishment of rural electric cooperatives and fairer prices for farmers. All these policies started at a local Grange and were then passed to the state level."

A special celebration is being held between 1-3 p.m. Saturday (Oct. 25) to mark the 125th convention. An Olympic-style torch that has been moving from county to county the past year will kickoff the anniversary celebration, which includes a program to showcase the many accomplishments of the Pennsylvania State Grange. The public is invited to attend this free event at the Scottish Rite Cathedral.

Another highlight of the five-day convention will be the State of Agriculture Address from Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr., set for Monday afternoon, as well as the presentation of the various departmental awards on Tuesday evening.

Awards to be presented Tuesday evening at the All-Granger banquet include: the State Master's Award for Excellence in Community Service and Membership Growth; Community Service awards to the outstanding Subordinate (local) and Pomona (county) Granges, Past Officer awards and the Granger of the Year award, the highest honor bestowed upon an individual for service to the organization.

Youth members, ages 15-35, will take center stage Sunday as they compete in the Public Speaking, Sing-A-Song and Knowledge Bowl competitions beginning at 2:30 p.m. at the Inn at Reading.

"The competition in these events is tough and the talent is outstanding as Youth members battle for state-wide honors and the right to perform against their peers from around the country at the National Grange convention," Steel said. "These youths demonstrate skills and abilities that they have learned as Grange members. Many are leaders within their own Granges and will one day be the leaders of our nation."

The Pennsylvania State Grange is a 125-year-old family fraternity representing 30,000 rural Pennsylvanians. The organizations offers its members benefits such as insurance, a credit union, lobbying efforts, community service, and social activities. The Grange is making Pennsylvania a better place to live through its legislative endeavors, community service work and providing member services.

Grangers Demonstrate Love With Their Hands

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - For the 21st consecutive year the Women's Activities Department of the Pennsylvania State Grange is sponsoring its stuffed toys contest. But this just isn't any contest.

In fact, the stuffed toy contest has evolved into something more than just another competition. It isn't about winning awards or accolades from your peers. Or even being the best.

No, the only winners in this "Labor of Love" are the children who receive these toys. When nearly 1,000 Grangers from around the state descend upon Berks County for the 125th annual Pa. State Grange convention, they'll bring with them nearly 9,000 toys to be judged and then distributed to Ronald McDonald Houses, ambulance services, children hospitals and other needy charities.

Most of the toys will be distributed to services located in the region of the host county. The stuffed toys program is sponsored by Fairfield Processing.

"These Grangers are more interested in toys for loving than toys for judging," Becky Michalka, women's activities director of the State Grange, said. "There were 8,723 toys made last year, and, according to the reports I've been receiving, there will be many submitted this year."

The toys, however, won't be the only labor of love on display at the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Reading. Over 1,000 baby quilts for HIV-positive and crack-addicted babies will be stacked to the ceiling.

"The ABC Quilts for AIDS babies is designed to make their lives a little more comfortable," Michalka said, "because many of these babies won't live to see their second birthday."

In addition to the toys and quilts, Grangers make clothing items for nursing homes, prepare food that is donated to food banks, cut soup labels for charitable groups and develop kits containing personal care produdcts that are distributed to abused women shelters, to name a few.

Manheim Livestock Sale Totals $80,774

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — A total of $80,774 was raised Oct. 10 during the annual sale of market livestock at the Manheim Farm Show, according to Jay Mylin, auction coordinator.

The celebratory atmosphere of the last evening event of the annual Farm Show was added to by fans attending a Manheim High School home football game.

The fairgrounds are located adjacent to the high school football field. The fair itself, especially midway attractions and food booths, are set up next to the ball field.

Highschool football spectators boost the fair's last day's crowd and help support the fair. Home games are scheduled every two years.

Held on the last day of the Manheim Fair, the auction sells four species of market livestock (raised for meat production) exhibited by youth during the week — goats, sheep, pigs and steer.

Instead of selling all of the grand and reserve grand champions of each species at the start, and then selling off the remaining animals specie-by-specie, Manheim's auction is designed to sell off each animal of each specie one at a time.

While this means that buyers intending to purchase champions might have to wait a couple of hours until their intended purchase comes up for sale, they can wait and enjoy the rest of the auction, or, in the meantime, experience some of the fair festivities.

The sale setup also seems to ensure that support is distributed more equitably to all youths, and not just directed heavily upon the champions. Mylin said he noted that there was strong, even support of youth during the sale.

There were 116 hogs offered for sale; 36 sheep; 14 goats; and 24 steer.

Returning volunteer Manheim-area auctioneers were Bob Wogelmuth, Dave White and John Stauffer. Though a final tally wasn't available this week, about 40 buyers registered for the auction.

Like other fair and 4-H livestock auctions, several processors offered to buy back the live animals from the buyers, at market value. Market values were listed in the sale catalog. This way buyers can support the livestock auction without having to deal with the live animal, although a number of buyers do take possession of the animals.

Hatfield Quality Meats Inc. purchased the buy-back hogs, while Dunlop Inc. purchase goats and sheep, Stauffers of Kissel Hill purchased sheep, and New Holland Sales Stables purchased steers.

The results of the auction showed that the price received for market goats averaged $2 per pound and totalled $1,883.

The grand champion goat, exhibited by Rebekah Landis of Lititz, weighed 93 pounds and was purchased by Bill Arnold, with Manheim Auto Auction, for $2.70 per pound.

The reserve grand champion goat, exhibited by Brian Geib of Manheim, weighed 69 pounds and was purchased for $3.75 per pound by Bob Obetz of Worley and Obetz Inc.

The price received for market lambs averaged $2.89 per pound and totalled $12,380.

The grand champion lamb, exhibited by Corby Zeigler of Lititz, weighed 132 pounds and sold for $12 per pound to his grandfather John Ebersole of Speedwell Construction.

The reserve grand champion lamb, exhibited by Jessica Stolt-

Grangers To Consider Resolutions

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) -- Over 500 Pennsylvania State Grange members will review resolutions to set policy on a number of important issues during the Grange's 125th convention, in Reading Oct. 25-29.

Those issues included land use concerning eminent domain, nutrient management, the Clean and Green Act, and property assessment; the local tax reform referendum; the proposed increases in the self-employed/ small business health insurance rates; changes in tractor trailer regulations; and the Environmental Protection Agency proposal to pass stricter standards on particulate matter.

The convention is to be supported by the 12 Granges in Berks County.

"As a grass-roots organization, the policies determined here will influence our legislative efforts on Capitol Hill as we work on legislation that will affect agriculture and rural Pennsylvania," Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director, said. "These issues are of greatest concern to our membership, and the Pennsylvania State Grange will see that these policies are addressed at the state and federal level."

Summaries of the key issues to be considered by the delegates are:

Land Issues:

The Pennsylvania State Grange has received numerous resolutions concerning land and how it is used.

"Receiving so many resolutions on a number of issues from eminent domain to nutrient management and property assessment," Shambaugh said, "shows that our statewide membership is greatly concerned about the increase in the pressure being exerted on them from outside sources over how they manage their land."

The eminent domain resolution seeks to prohibit that action from taking place on land placed in an Agricultural Security Area without agreement by the landowner. A companion resolution calls for a property owner to have the right to maintain open space in lieu of facing eminent domain proceedings.

The Clean and Green resolution states that every farm in the state be assessed based only on the farm acreage with no taxation on the farm residence, agricultural buildings and driveways.

Local Tax Reform Referendum:

The Grange delegate body is expected to pass a resolution encouraging Pennsylvanians to vote "yes" on the ballot question concerning the Homestead Exemption, which would open the door to local tax reform.

"The Grange has long-standing policy that seeks to shift the cumbersome tax burden on property owners to a system that is more equitable for everyone" Shambaugh said. "Local tax reform is long overdue, and we encourage voters to seize the opportunity on election day (Nov. 4) to correct this problem."

Self-Employed Insurance Rates:

The Pennsylvania State Grange is gravely concerned about a rate increase by three health care insurers on the self-employed and small business owners.

In a letter to the Pennsylvania Insurance Department, the Grange, who has many members who fall into those two categories, said those who have to purchase their own insurance pay in excess of $500 a month, and, in many cases, find insurance costs to be prohibitive.

"Farmers are finding that premium costs are cutting deeply into meager profits from their farm operations," Shambaugh said. "An insurance increase at this time of financial hardship would be an extreme burden."

EPA Air Quality Standards:

Both the Pennsylvania State and National Grange has been battling an EPA proposal to set more stringent air quality standards for ozone and fine particles (also known as particulate matter).

"Meeting these extreme standards will change our lives and require very expensive changes and control of our factories, small businesses and farms," Shambaugh said. "The implementation of the standards will increase the cost of gasoline, diesel fuel and vehicle inspections, and place excessive limitations on farming operations - from spreading lime or fertilizer or anything that creates a dust," Shambaugh said.

Separate resolutions on this issue seek to exempt agriculture from the standards and to lobbying federal legislators to have them curtail the activity of the EPA in trying to implement these standards.

Tractor Trailer Regulations:

Two resolutions were submitted that, if passed, would fight a move by the American Trucking Association (ATA) to increase the size, length and/or number of trailers on Pennsylvania highways. A third resolution seeks to keep the trucking industry from limiting the number of inspections to one per year.

"The ATA is proposing to increase weight limits on trucks from 80,000 to 129,000 pounds and allow 'triples', a type of longer combination vehicles in states that have never allowed them before," Shambaugh said. "Concerning inspections, the delegates will examine whether we need to have policy that would require more than once-a-year inspections on tractor trailers due to their size and the number of miles they travel each year."

A total of 90 resolutions will be considered at the 125th annual session of the Pennsylvania State Grange. The resolutions that are passed at the convention become Grange policy. Resolutions that become policy and have federal implications are sent to the National Grange convention to be considered by delegates at the national session. The 130 annual National Grange convention runs Nov. 10-16 in Springfield, Mass.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, community service and member services. There are over 31,000 members in 67 counties.

Michalka said being involved in these projects raise awareness among Grange members.

"We have whole families that participate in these projects together," Michalka said. "By participating together as a family, it makes them aware of the problems in their communities and that families, by working together, can do something about these problems and make their communitiies a better place to live.

The Pennsylvania State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization that is dedicated to making Pennsylvania a better place to live. POULTRY MANURE PROCESSING IN HOLLAND

In September I had the opportunity to lead a tour of composting sites in Europe. Part of the trip focused on the poultry industry in Holland. One of the sites we visited was the Center for Applied Poultry Research. The center is funded 50% by tax dollars and 50% by direct assessments on producers. It is run by a board of directors one half of which are poultry farmers who are direct beneficiaries of the research and who are directly funding the research. This provides a strong link between the producers and the research community.

Vertical integration as we know it in the poultry industry in this country is not really present in Holland. For the most part farmers are independent producers who contract for feed, pullets, and other inputs. Most contracts are renewed every three months so it keeps strong competition working for the purchases producers need. Because of this structure farmers are actively involved in directing the industry.

We visited two poultry operations while we were there. The first was the Wierko company owned and operated by Mr. Harry J Wierik. He has one million birds in the operation and no crop land. Therefore all manure is sold off the farm. One interesting aspect of this operation is that most of equipment including cages used in the operation are made on site. A shop with several full-time employees is kept busy with equipment fabrication.

Another unique aspect of this farm was the proactive efforts that are underway in response to concerns about animal welfare Some experimental cages are being tried which include a roost for the birds and a door between pairs of cages which enable the birds to move between two cages

On this farm manure is collected on a belt system under the cages. This manure is taken to a static pile composting unit. Here the raw manure is mixed with equal parts of wood chips on a volume basis. It is placed in the composting unit where air is forced through the manure for three days. Then the wood chips are screened off resulting in manure with 30% moisture This is then placed in a drying tunnel where heated air is blown over the manure for five days. The air is heated by a heat exchanger which captures heat generated in the compost unit by the composting process. After five days in the drying tunnel the manure has been dried to 10% moisture.

The air coming out of the drying tunnel is sent to a scrubber to remove ammonia which has been lost by the manure. The ammonia is removed in a liquid which is then sprayed back on the manure in the compost unit to return this lost nitrogen to the manure. One half of the air leaving the scrubber is recycled back to the drying tunnel and one half is cooled in a long tunnel outdoors before passing through a biofilter to remove odors. The biofilter consists of bark mulch in trailer size containers.

The air is forced in the bottom of the containers, passes through the bark and is vented to the atmosphere through the top of the containers. This was very effective in removing odors and dust.

The dry manure consists of small particles which currently are marketed in large bulk containers for about $65 per ton. Most of the product is presently shipped to Germany or the US for use on golf courses. The fertilizer analysis is 3.5-4 0% N, 4.0-5.0% P205, 4-5% K2O. The final product contains 60% organic matter.

A pellet mill is currently being installed to further process the manure. The investment in the manure handling system is about $3.00 per bird. Obviously this is a significant investment which would be much more difficult here with lower egg income

A second operation we visited was owned by Mr. Van Putten Manure is collected on belts under the cages and usually is in the chicken house about two days. This manure is about 35-40% moisture when it is removed and sent to a tower of belts in a chamber called a tunnel which adjoins the chicken house. Here the manure starts on the top layer of 14 belts. It moves from end to end each time dropping to the belt below

Air is forced over each layer of the belts. In two days the manure gets to the end of the process and it has been dried to 15-20% moisture. Next the manure is pelletized and dried further to less than 10% moisture

The product is packaged in very convenient 11 pound containers, fifty five pound bags, and large bulk bags containing two to three tons. These products are marketed across Europe, the Middle East as well as in the U S.

There seems to be several advantages that farmers in Holland have which enables them to be tough competition in the world market for fertilizer products For example on the Van Putten farm manure from several other producers is hauled to the pelletizing plant and added to the production from that farm. This provides for efficiency of operation of the pelletizing plant which is running six days a week. This would be difficult to do here due to biosecurity concerns The minimal biosecurity that was practiced on these farms was striking relative to the concerns we have in the US. It is an open question whether this will change in the future.

Another advantage that the Dutch farmer has is relatively low energy costs enabling drying of the manure with outside energy sources. On the Van Putten farm electricity is generated by burning natural gas in turbines. This electricity was produced at about the same cost that it could be purchased off the grid. However fifty percent of the energy is released as waste heat which is captured to dry the manure This means that the heat to dry the manure is essentially free.

Finally the major advantage that producers in Holland have is the egg prices One laying hen generates $17-$20 per year in egg revenue for the poultry farmers in Holland while here revenue is often in the $11-$12 per year range. Obviously if one has $5-$9 more per bird to work with there are many more things that can be done with the by product of egg production.

Farmers in Holland don't have everything in their favor however. Higher land costs and much more restrictive regulations increase costs for producers. One also needs to buy a manure quota to have animals which adds to the start up costs.

A number of lessons can to be learned on a trip like this First the global nature of the economy we work in was clearly evident. Farmers overseas are not only competing with us in other countries but in our own as well Some of the technology used overseas can be very useful here However before we open our wallets and make major purchases we need to understand the differences in our economies. We then must evaluate whether the technology which is profitable and successful somewhere else will be useful under our very different set of economic constraints.

If you are interested in learning more about this trip contact me at the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Office A meeting on composting will be held this winter where the participants in the trip will share what they learned on the trip Watch for announcements as we approach the winter season

HAYNET INFORMATION ONLINE

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A computer-based clearinghouse of information designed to help drought-stricken farm operations is now online in Pennsylvania, thanks to a cooperative effort of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Called Haynet, the service is offered through PENpages, a statewide public computer service maintained and operated by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Anyone with a computer and modem can log onto PENpages by calling a local telephone number available in each of Pennsylvania's 67 counties. PENpages also can be accessed on the World Wide Web at www.penpages.psu.edu.

Some lingering effects of the summer heat will be felt this winter, when farmers whose hay crops were decimated by drought begin to run out of forage for their animals.

Farmers with forage and grain for sale can call their county Cooperative Extension office to be added to Haynet's dealer list.

Haynet was first launched during the drought of 1988, when it proved to be popular. The service was last activated in 1995, and its revival this year was prompted in part by requests from worried farmers.

For more information about Haynet and other drought-related services, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county.

People interested in using PENpages can obtain a free User Guide by writing to Computer Services, Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences, 405 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802 or by calling (814) 863-3449.

The guide provides step-by-step instructions and local telephone numbers to call for each Pennsylvania county. The service also can be accessed on the World Wide Web at www.penpages.psu.edu.

through the Milk Urea Nitrogen TEST at PA DHIA

Economics of MUN Testing

- Protein is a costly ingredient in dairy rations.
- Some farms overfeed protein by 10-20%.
- Overfeeding protein by 20% would cost producers about $50/cow/year
  100 cows = $5000/year
- Cost of MUN testing is 15¢/cow/month for members
- MUN testing can signal excess protein feeding or energy imbalance. If correct adjustments are made it could significantly improve the efficiency of milk production and conception rate.

West Chester Haflinger Enthusiasts Show Light Champion

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Like some foods and beverages offered today, there are two types of Haflinger stallions — light and draft — recognized at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition show.

The grand champion stallion of the Haflinger light horse show at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition was a 2-year-old, Austin TOF, owned by Jacob and Grace Paulson of West Chester.

The Paulson's young stallion was also the junior champion of the show.

"We have only been in the Haflinger business for a year and a half, and this is our first trip to KILE," Jacob said, adding that they own 12 horses, having purchased Austin a year ago.

"He comes from a long line of superior Haflingers," he said. "His father is Aristocrat TOF, and his mother is Recka."

The reserve junior and reserve grand champion stallion in the light horse show was a 5½-month-old animal, Appalachian Jubilee TWF, owned by Gary and Kathlee Rush of Claysville.

They said their stallion too comes from champion stock. His sire was the 1993 national grand champion and his mare's sire was a national grand champion.

In the draft classes, a 2-year-old stallion, Michel Too, owned by Steve Ramsey of Greentown, Indiana, was named junior and grand champion.

The reserve grand champion draft Haflinger stallion was Master Piece S V, also a 2-year-old, owned by Spring View Farm in Bellefonte.

Spring View Farm also showed the grand and reserve grand mares of the show, as well as the junior mare.

Their 3-year-old Nanette SDH was named grand champion, while their older Lalique was named reserve grand champion mare.

State Protects 100,000 Farmland Acres

were introduced by state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr., who served as master of ceremonies.

Hayes noted the achievements of the FFA leaders and also that its president Mike Clark is a candidate for national FFA office.

The agriculture secretary also introduced agriculture ambassadors from Delaware Valley College, state dairy princesses, and the state cattlemen's queen, aw well as former agriculture secretary Boyd Wolff.

The high school band played the national anthem, while the FFA leaders led in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Hayes also provided the program welcome, introduction of guests, members of the state General Assembly, the state Agricultural Land Preservation Board, and presentation of an award to the Northampton County Agricultural Land Preservation Board for its accomplishments.

Also recognized were the 4th, 5th and 6th grade students from the local elementary school who were seated in the tents.

Ridge made a special point of addressing the youth and said that his father — who had only six years of formal education, but whom Ridge said was extremely well read and spoken — told him that someo.f the best lessons happen outside of the classroom.

He said that he hoped the youth would learn that the adults gathered together on Tuesday think "... that it's very, very important for our future to preserve farmland to provide food and fiber."

The significance of the state program helping to secure development rights on 100,000 acres of the state's prime farmland in 44 counties (Pennsylvania has 67 counties) has nothing to do with the actual number of acres.

According to 1994 data reported by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, there was 7,800,000 acres in farming representing about 51,000 different farming operations, with an average size of 153 acres per farm.

However, the 100,000-acre milestone is considered significant because it's 100,000 acres less to worry about losing.

It represents the fact that Pennsylvania has had the fastest growing farmland preservation program, according to Ed Thompson, senior vice president of the American Farmland Trust.

Thompson presented an achievement award to Pennsylvania in recognition of its farmland preservation program.

He said that Pennsylvania's legacy so far is that when it started the farmland preservation program, it led the way for other large farming states to follow suit.

The Pennsylvania program goes back a number of years to a law proposed by Lancaster County's state Sen. Noah Wenger, who also was instrumental in the farmland preservation law, along with others, such as Sen. Edward Helfrick, for whom the current state Rep. Shelia Miller (R-Berks) had previously worked as executive director of the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee.

Wenger, who is currently acting chairman of the Senate Ag and Rural Affairs Committee, moving up from vice chairman in light of the stepping down of York County's Sen. Dan Delp. Delp has recently become enmeshed in some personal legal and political problems stemming from alleged misconduct and illegal activity involving minors, alcohol, prostitution and potentially misuse of government funds.

The law Sen. Wenger sponsored and promoted became the foundation law for the state's farmland preservation program. That law created a local agricultural zoning tool which expresses the desire of landowners to remain in agriculture, called Agricultural Security Areas (ASA).

A local government can adopt ordinances allowing the creation of ASAs within its borders. ASAs have minimum area restrictions and confer no other special privileges to those who own such designated land except that government (including school districts and local muncipal authorities) is supposed to make every attempt to find an alternative to condemnation of such lands for such things as highways and public facilities.

In order to be considered for farmland preservation, the farmland must first be included in an ASA.

In other words, the state's current program required at least two different pieces of legislation, and both required some political and educational effort and patience in order to gain popularity.

(Turn to Page A29)

From the left, Ed Thompson, vice president of American Farmland Trust, presents an achievement award to state Gov. Tom Ridge upon the state program reaching more than 100,000 acres protected under the state farmland preservation program, while state Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes Jr. applauds the moment and achievement.

Gov. Tom Ridge signs an executive order calling for state agencies to actively make coordinated efforts to preserve farmland.

Willard Setzer receives applause in recognition of his selling of development easements on 273 acres of his farm into the state farmland preservation program, taking the program over the 100,000-acre milestone. Sitting from the left is Ed Thompson, senior vice president of American Farmland Trust; Willard's sons Jeff and Randy Setzer; William Brackbill, Northampton County executive; and state Gov. Tom Ridge.

With the Nazareth Area High School Blue Eagle Marching Band seated beneath a tent behind them, a news reporter interviews Jeff and Randy Setzer. A corn combine is parked in the background.

State Gov. Tom Ridge presents a framed aerial photograph of the Willard Setzer farm to Willard as part of the state's recognition of the 100,000th acre of farmland preserved under the state program.

Family Day On The Farm Scheduled

RISING SUN, Md. — The Cecil County Cooperative Extension Service invites everyone to join us for the second annual Family Day on the Farm to be held Sunday, October 19, from 1 to 5 p.m. This event is free and open to the public. Our hosts for the afternoon are Paul and Kaye and Richard and Janet Montgomery, owners of Cherry Grove Christmas Tree Farm near Rising Sun. A rain date is scheduled for October 26. In the event of questionable weather call (410) 996-5144 or listen to WSER Radio (1150 AM) or WXCY Radio (103.7 FM) for updates.

Cherry Grove Christmas Tree Farm is a popular family destination from the weekend after Thanksgiving through Christmas, offering top quality, locally grown Christmas trees in all sizes and species. The Montgomerys purchased the farm, a former dairy farm, from their grandfather in 1972 and planted Christmas trees that same year. 1997 represents the 25th year in the Christmas tree business for the Montgomerys. The farm now comprises 45,000 trees of all sizes and species in neat rows along the farm's gently rolling 100 owned and 50 leased acres. Annually, 7,000 seedlings are planted which, with meticulous care, will be 6-to 8-foot beauties in about 8 years. In their 25 years in business, Paul and Richard have made numerous improvements to the farm including putting in terraces and grassed waterways for soil conservation, building a pond for sediment control and wildlife habitat, and refurbishing the old barn which is now the headquarters for their Christmas business.

Sunday afternoon will feature exciting activities for all ages. Visitors can take a hayride tour of the farm and learn from Maryland Christmas Tree Growers Association officers what it takes to produce the perfect tree and what species is best for your family. Natural Resource Conservation Service staff will also describe the many conservation practices implemented on the farm. Before or after the tour, guests can make their own single serving of ice cream, make fall crafts, visit the children's petting zoo, or browse through the many agriculture exhibits.

Cherry Grove Christmas Tree Farm is located at 689 Little New York Road. From Rt. 273 go north on Sylmar Road. Turn right on Little New York Road and watch for Cherry Grove sign on your left. Ample free parking is available. For more information contact the Cecil County Cooperative Extension at (410) 996-5280 or (410) 658-4041.

The state program also required a voter referendum in order to float a $100 million state bond issue to kick off the program. Since then, a state cigarette tax was added to provide a substantial amount of annual funds for continued development rights purchases.

The state farmland preservation program is referred to in Harrisburg as the Agriculture Land Easement Purchase Program. There are other similar types of programs in the state, public and private that seek to preserve farmland.

American Farmland Trust works with all groups in an attempt to find ways to preserve farmland, and supports the use of the state program.

Thompson's message to the audience wasn't all rosey, however. He said that the state is still losing 25 percent more farmland than it protects.

He said nationally 10 acres of farmland are lost for every acre preserved.

He said that while the Pennsylvania program is "second to none," the state effort as well as national effort requires "more, faster."

Gov. Ridge noted that Pennsylvania lost 46 percent of its farmland in less than 50 years.

By the 1980s it became obvious that there was a need to permanently protect farmland from unalterable changes, he said.

Ridge also said that in addition to the importance of farmland to the state, its economy, its past and future, that there is another reason to protect it.

"The rolling fields provide food and fiber, but let's face it, they add to the beauty of the state."

One of the guest speakers, William Brackbill, a Northampton County executive, took the opportunity to announce publicly for the first time that the county budget this year includes an additional $100,000 for farmland preservation efforts.

According to a local farmland preservation official, that means the county has doubled its contribution toward seeking cost-sharing funds from the state in securing additonal easement purchases.

In fact, it was announced that on Monday the county board is to consider approval of an adjecent 70-acre parcel of farmland owned by one of the Setzer sons.

In introducing Gov. Ridge, Ag Secretary Hayes took some time to discuss the history of his own relationship with Ridge, including when he was serving the state as a United States congressman.

Hayes said that Ridge has always been a strong advocate for agriculture and made a point of stressing the governor's support for agriculture in the state.

"I would not be here today (serving as agriculture secretary) if (Ridge) were not 100 percent in support of agriculture," Hayes said.

"Ridge, as far as this secretary of agriculture is concerned, is the number one governor in the United States of America," Hayes said, adding that with the leadership of the governor agriculture will get help in not just selling development rights, but in growing in profitibility and opportunities.

Ridge also honored Hayes, a former state representative, citing Hayes' leadership in the state House of Represenatives and his support of the farmland preservation laws.

Also part of the ceremonies, Gov. Ridge presented a plaque and an aerial photograph of the farm to Willard Setzer, along with congratulations and thanks. Willard and sons Randy and Jeff sat with Ridge, Hayes and other dignitaries on the platform stage.

Schmidt Exhibits Manheim Sheep Breed Champion

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Sometimes horns can make sheep champions to behold. So why not name what you see?

That's what Jessica Schmidt did before she exhibited her supreme champion sheep at the Manheim Farm Show last week.

Jessica, inspired by the country song "Texas Tornado," brought her entry into a whirlwind of a sheep show at Manheim, taking home the trophy with her Dorset yearling ewe, "Horndog," named from the song, she noted.

Jessica, 15, is the daughter of Pete and Laurie Schmidt, Drumore. Naming Horndog was easy. "I always liked the song," she said. The Solanco High School sophomore said she won before at Manheim, also with a Dorset yearling. It's her breed of choice — she cares for 20 Dorset ewes at home. She also takes care of five Montadales.

Jessica, who plans to show at the state Farm Show, puts Horndog on pasture. "She's outside all the time," said Jessica. The Dorset enjoys grass and hay and is fed a sheep and lamb finisher.

Tim Hall, show judge from Dalmatia who manages Suffolk and Montadale sheep, picked the entry that would best represent the breed and the industry.

At the market lamb show, Hall chose the heavyweight market sale sheep shown by Corby Zeigler, a 132-pound Suffolk crossbred wether, as champion.

Corby, 13, son of Dean and Carole Zeigler, Manheim, is in the 7th grade at Manheim Central Junior High School. Corby exhibited a wether named "Chewy," he said, named so because "it chews on everything." Corby said as he was sitting down at a show, the lamb began chewing on ribbons stuffed in Corby's back pocket. But the wether "likes to chew on anything."

In an interesting twist, Hall selected the same champions that won nonsale divisions at the Elizabethtown Fair. Two different judges picked them in the same order. But at Elizabethtown, they were nonsale lambs; those same lambs won champion overall market sale lambs last week, according to Jessica Stoltzfus, who won reserve champion.

Jessica, 17, is the daughter of Frank and Irene Stoltzfus, Elizabethtown. The Elizabethtown High School junior exhibited a 124-pound Suffolk crossbred wether that she obtained from Tim Fleener, Blue Acres Farm, Robesonia. This was Jessica's first champion at Manheim.

For the first time, the Manheim Farm Show introduced a new class, a bred and owned division. Champion bred and owned went to Travis Donough. Reserve was Ryan Donough. Results of the new division are included here.

Showmanship winners included senior, Jessica Stoltzfus; intermediate, Derick Bollinger; junior, Adam Zurin; and beginner, Stephanie Kauffman.

At Manheim there were a total of 47 exhibitors and 160 sheep. Following is a list of show placings.

STUBBLE'S TOUGH

Firestone's New "Stubble Stompers" Are Tougher!

With today's improved hybrids, corn stalks are tougher than ever ... and that's bad news for front and implement tires. If you're tired of the chipping, chunking and punctures caused by standing stubble, fight back with Firestone's new "Stubble Stomper" front and implement tires.

Invest In Yourself

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Dramatic changes continue to take place in the dairy industry. The old order has changed and new needs and demands have been placed on DHIA.

PA DHIA recognizes this trend and realize membership seeks more and better data service more quickly. It's a whole new world since the advent of competition in DHIA circles

We realize members must derive a benefit from our services and above all included in this realm of cost/value benefits are the options available.

Profitable dairy farming in today's world includes both high yield and high quality of product. Feed costs are the largest expenditure on most dairy farms. Optimize feeding to optimize profitability are sure to be at the top of most every dairyman's goals.

The big question is how do we accomplish this task?

The clear-cut answer should be to participate in the PA DHIA milk urea analysis program. This program is cost efficient at only 15¢ per cow to PA DHIA members. Sample collection is easy as well as routine with the use of only one sample per cow to analyze fat, protein, solid not fat, somatic cell count and milk urea nitrogen results.

Benefits resulting from using the test results are reducing fertility/reproduction problems, avoiding loss in milk yield, reducing excessive nitrogen discharges and ensuring energy/protein balance. The influence of excessive MUN could result in disease or injury to the liver.

Included in the reproductive performance of the cow is the conception rate percentage which could be a direct link to the milk urea nitrogen results.

Nutritionists, veterinarians, consultants and extension agents are very instrumental in providing interpretation of results to the dairyman. At any rate, factors influencing results can be pinpointed with the help of these professionals.

One can easily summarize that MUN testing provides useful management information which has an economic value, can easily be measured and comes with user-friendly analysis report.

Why wait? Invest in yourself and ask your PA DHIA technician to include you on the MUN option on your next test day. Please feel free to contact PA DHIA at 1-800-344-8378 if we can assist with your dairy management decisions.

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

New Holland Adds Five Side-Delivery Spreaders

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Five new side-delivery spreaders from New Holland are available in sizes from 1,000- to more than 3,000-gallon tank capacity. The new spreaders handle all types of manure and biosolids from pumpable slurry to tougher, more solid pen manure with bedding.

New models 3102, 3106, 3110, 3114 and 3118 New Holland side-delivery spreader capacity ranges from 1,000- to more than 3,000-gallon tank capacity.

The new spreaders feature large diameter center augers with aggressive flighting that can cut through hard-to-handle dry poultry manure and pen-packed, bedding-filled livestock manure. Side-delivery expellers with hydraulic gate control allow any spreading rate — from heavy applications to accurate, light rate top-dressing that's important for new seedlings.

The combination of accurate spreading rate control and a low-friction tank liner also make these spreaders an ideal choice for municipal biosolids application. Spreading accuracy simplifies compliance for sludge spreading contractors who must comply with environmental restrictions. Flotation tires for all models with tandems on the largest sizes, ease heavy loads through difficult terrain.

The center unloading augers are raised and lowered hydraulically to avoid bridging, and optional parallel movement breaks up and delivers large loader forkfuls of pen manure to the expeller. Constant-velocity PTO 540 RPM drives provide smooth power transfer from the tractor. The larger, 2,476- and 3,188-gallon sizes are available with 1,000 RPM drive.

Company Budgets For Production Plant Upgrades

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation has announced plans to improve and expand existing seed corn production facilities located at Waterman, Ill., Illiopolis, Ill., and Boone, Iowa.

Dekalb plans to invest about $40 million to address capacity constraints and to enhance seed quality at these facilities, which have been identified, among others, as key production locations for the company.

"In recent years, the company has made capital improvements at the totally irrigated facilities in Constantine, Michigan, and Kearney, Nebraska," Kent Martin, director of supply management, said. "These three new expansions, targeted at Illinois and Iowa, represent Dekalb's continuing commitment to key corn belt customers and area seed producers."

Martin said, "Continued sales momentum coupled with Dekalb's commitment to be a leading supplier of high quality, elite seed products are fueling these expansions." The plans focus on seed dryers, bulk storage systems, conditioning and packaging towers, as well as climate-controlled warehousing at the three facilities. This will allow Dekalb to install state-of-the-art, quality-enhancing technology in conjunction with dramatic increases in capacity at each of the specified facilities.

• Details of the Waterman, Ill. seed corn production plant expansion include spending about $13 million to purchase additional land, to construct a seed dryer with individualized temperature and air controls, high quality bulk storage, and additional climate-controlled warehousing, and to expand conditioning and packaging capacity. The Waterman facility is a partially irrigated production location. Seed corn production is contracted with area producers near Waterman and Rock Falls, Ill.

• Dekalb will spend about $16 million on improvements to the Illiopolis, Ill. seed corn production facility to construct a seed dryer with individualized temperature and air controls, additional high quality bulk storage, and additional climate-controlled warehousing and to expand conditioning and packaging capacity. The Illiopolis facility is a partially irrigated production location. Seed corn production is contracted with area producers near Illiopolis, Monmouth, and Mason City, Ill.

• Capital improvement to the facility in Boone, Iowa is a continuation of work that began last year when a seed dryer and high quality bulk storage were added to the facility. Dekalb will spend an additional $8.5 million on improvements to the Boone, Iowa corn production plant to expand conditioning and packaging, and to construct climate-controlled warehousing.

Deere Introduces Row-Crop Ripper

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere is introducing a new row-crop ripper that offers unmatched productivity and versatility.

The John Deere 955 Row-Crop Ripper allows producers to combine ripping and bedding work in a single pass.

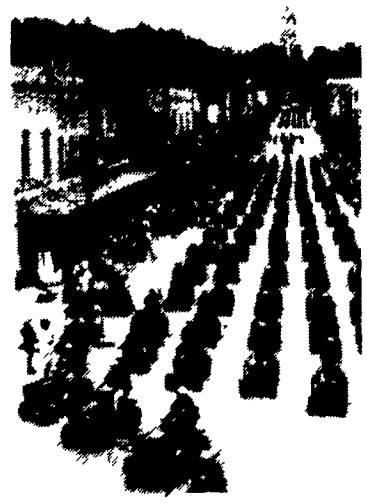
The 955 Ripper is available in 4-, 6-, 8-, and 10-standard configurations for on-row ripping, and in 5-, 7-, 9-, and 11-standard configurations for between-row ripping. This new ripper allows producers to combine ripping and bedding work in a single pass to a depth of 24 inches without coulters, 18 inches with coulters. Row spacing of 20, 22, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, or 44 inches can be easily adjusted on the ripper toolbar. A 36-inch underframe clearance provides ample room for material flow through the machine.

To accommodate a variety of soil conditions, the 955 Ripper offers a choice of three ripper standards: an economical straight shear-bolt standard for use without a coulter, an extended straight shear-bolt standard for use with or without a coulter, and a parabolic spring-reset standard that can be used with or without a coulter.

The 4x4-inch rear bar's depth adjustment is independent of toolbar depth. The rear bar is designed to allow easy attachment of disk bedders, bedding sweeps, and field-proven Tru-Depth™ standards for added versatility in one pass. Disk bedders are available with 18- and 20-inch blades in a staggered configuration for rounded-bed applications, or an opposed configuration for peaked-bed applications. The conservation sweep provides row-crop cultivation or bedding at the same time as ripping. The Tru-Depth standard adds a primary tillage operation during the ripping pass.

Simplicity Tractors Set Record

PORT WASHINGTON, Wis. — Lawn and garden equipment dealer CJ Wonsidler Bros. located in Quakertown, recently participated in the Simplicity Manufacturing, Inc. anniversary parade, a Guinness Book World Record attempt for the largest gathering of tractors.



CJ Wonsidler Bros. drove a limited edition anniversary tractor in the parade. More than 800 Simplicity tractors were driven by dealers, company employees, and celebrities.

The parade was held in Port Washington, Wis., where Simplicity celebrated its 75-year manufacturing heritage with dealers from around the world.

CJ Wonsidler Bros. drove a limited edition anniversary tractor in the parade. More than 800 Simplicity tractors were driven by dealers, company employees, and celebrities — former NFL players drove the company's Sports Series Lawn Tractors designed to emulate football helmets.

Simplicity president Tom Fruechtel said, "We view our dealer network as an extension of the company and the parade was a very memorable, festive way for us to celebrate our relationship."

During the three-day visit to Simplicity headquarters, dealers also toured the company's manufacturing facilities and were introduced to the largest roll-out of new products in the company's history. A new zero turn riding mower and feature-laden garden tractor, the Legacy, were unveiled to the dealers who test drove the products at the Simplicity 40-acre proving grounds.

Vermeer, Freeman Strike Up Alliance

PELLA, Iowa — Officials at Vermeer Manufacturing Co. and J.A. Freeman & Son have signed an agreement in which Vermeer will manufacture the highly respected Freeman 1592 Big Baler for the long-time Portland, Ore., firm effective immediately.

In addition, Vermeer will market a large square baler of its own called Vermeer CommandRam, engineered with the design and structure of the Freeman 1592.

The two companies also intend to colaborate efforts on future engineering upgrades and products with the idea of establishing a long-term business association.

Both Freeman and Vermeer are pioneers in large-scale hay harvesting systems: Freeman having developed the first big square baler with hydraulic ram in 1985, and Vermeer, the innovator of the first large round baler in 1972.

"We were very impressed with the enormous manufacturing capacity and capability of Vermeer," said Freeman Vice President Perk Freeman. "The efficiencies they offer in both purchasing and manufacturing are amazing. Plus, there's a lot of synergy and commonality among the two companies... the culture, the focus on specialization, the commitment to quality, the close-knit family atmosphere. I have a real good feeling about this alliance."

The agreement provides Vermeer with its first entree into the big square bale marketplace with a proven product. It also enables both companies to consolidate production and purchasing at Vermeer's larger, high-tech manufacturing facility in Pella, Iowa.

Variable Size Balers Available From Claas

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Claas of America offers the new Variant 180 variable chamber round baler to compliment its range of Rollant™ fixed-size chamber balers.

The Variant produces bales of varying sizes and densities to provide greater flexibility to those switching between producing small silage and hay bales to large straw and hay bales. The bales can be varied infinitely between 35 inches and 72 inches in diameter. Bale width is 48 inches.

The baler features a rotor to provide a positive crop feed from the 82-inch wide pickup. The rotor turns the bale immediately after the material enters the chamber to provide a faster start to each bale plus regulates and smoothes crop flow to produce a well-shaped bale.

A Roto Cut™ option featuring 14 spring-loaded knives in the throat feeds crop through by the rotor slicing the material. Theoretical chop length is 2¾ inches. The knives can be disengaged by operating a switch on the cab-mounted control box.

The bale chamber is made up of five high-tensile, wear-resistant belts, which cover 94 percent of the bale chamber and assure constant rotation. A pressure gauge mounted on the baler's front indicates the bale density created by the two hydraulic cylinders.

Total bale density can be varied for different types of crops and conditions while a gas accumulator independently controls bale center's density to give the bale breathing space through to its core if required.

Both Variant models are available with either Rollatex net wrapping or twine tying or both. Three rolls of net or 12 spools of twine can be carried on the baler.

The heavy-duty drives are designed for even the most difficult conditions. An additional belt drive ensures constant rotation when heavy silage is being baled. Automatic chain lubrication, bale discharge ramp, hydraulic pickup lift and dual-gauge wheel are standard equipment.

In the case of Swatara Swine, a pull-plug system contains manure in a one-acre anaerobic lagoon. The lagoon uses a 60-mil plastic liner atop of a clay soil bank. Like other operations, particularly Laurel Ridge, another company managed by Hostetter in Reinholds, the lagoon is completely fenced in. Manure is added through a piping system. The capacity approaches one million gallons, emptied after about 10 months to a year.

The lagoon uses a system of heat seams to hold the 20-foot strips of 60-mil plastic together.

Scott Bailey inspects the Laurel Ridge lagoon site, which is completely fenced in. Behind him is the farrowing barn and nurseries.

The manure, tested regularly, is applied when needed according to a manure plan managed by a local agronomic consulting service.

According to Scott Bailey, who manages five farms in Schaefferstown, Mifflinburg, Lewisburg, and Heidelberg, the manure is spread after farms get their first cutting of hay. In the fall, another application is made to fields that need it. Some is spread by truck and some is injected, depending on the site.

What is unique about the lagoon is that a system of tiles are buried below the lagoon. A pipeline feeds out to an area outside and is regularly monitored — if manure shows up in groundwater outflow, Hostetter knows there's a problem and can handle it right away.

A way to monitor the system to check for leaks "sounded exciting to me," he said.

Hostetter indicated that the liner system costs about 2 percent more than than the total cost of constructing a facility. A typical $1 million facility will include a lagoon liner system at a cost of approximately $20.000.

Hostetter noted that he tries to build the liner system beyond the standards.

"How high do we need to go to protect ourselves against any kind of legal ramifications?" he said.

Hostetter, like most of the industry, realizes the challenges in facing up to production — turning the most profits while protecting the environment, following a good neighbor policy, and taking care of employees and associated industries.

Hostetter Management finishes about 250,000-280,000 hogs per year, using a two-site, farrow-to-finish nethod. While the sow sites are farrow-to-feeder pigs, the hogs are moved at 50 pounds a piece to separate locations to finish at 240 pounds, marketed to Hatfield.

Hostetter has been involved with the swine business since 1981, when he worked for a 500-sow unit. He has worked on various businesses through the years, including a feeding company and an equipment company, before coming back to the hog business in 1992.

"I've always liked working with pigs," he said. "I like the business. I think it's an interesting business. It's changed a lot in the last 15-20 years. It's exciting. It's always a challenge."

A new facility, Pine Hill Pig Company in Bradford County, was

Producer Creates Quality

recently completed. The facility incorporates 2,800 sows, marketing about 56,000 pigs annually.

Using the 2,800-sow system allows the company to use split-sex feeding and phase feeding programs better. Hostetter noted that split-sex and phase feeding works better when the ages of the animals are closer together.

Elements of good neighbor policies — providing a low-cost, profitable facility, and using sound public relations — are tools that the whole industry needs to use more of, according to Hostetter.

Ever since the lagoon spill that happened several years ago in North Carolina, which stirred lots of controversy over the management of manure storage sites, the industry has been on the alert to protect themselves from legislation that could seriously hurt swine farm viability.

The North Carolina incident "made it out to be that we're all bad people — we're just hoodlums that are just trying to make all the money we can and we don't really care about what we leave behind," Hostetter said. "In fact, we're producing food, we're trying to provide good jobs, good families, and have good people around us."

Scott Bailey, an employee of Hostetter Management who oversees several units in Lebanon County, agrees. More so than ever, the industry must learn to communicate with farm neighbors in terms of manure management and providing solid neighbor relations.

Bailey recently received the Pork All American Award at the World Pork Expo in Indianapolis, Ind. in June this year. Bailey, who grew up in New Holland, said those in the industry, to survive, must learn to be "pro-active" while adopting all the technologies needed "as they become available."

Bailey recently reviewed the Laurel Ridge liner system site. Bailey, treasurer of the Lan/Chester Pork Producers, said the Laurel Ridge site, an old 500-sow unit, was converted to a 1,400-sow unit in 1995. A lagoon system was installed the same year. The liner system uses 15-20 foot wide 60-mil plastic liners, stretched tight alongside the banks, and the whole lagoon is fenced. Capacity is close to a million gallons.

More and more, according to Hostetter, the industry will be under attack by environmentalists. The business "will continue to be challenged by environmental groups. And there will be continuous suggestions about different kinds of legislation, different kinds of permitting, suggestions that will challenge large commercial animal units.

"One of the most important things we can do is participate in environmental programs," he said, including the Environmental Quality Assurance Program conducted by the National Pork Producers Council. It is something the whole industry needs to participate in, according to the swine facility manager.

Hostetter recently relocated the business headquarters to Lititz, to be more centrally located for the employees, which number about 50. The business receives all its feed from an Elizabethtown-based feed mill. A nutritionist, Dr. Dick Peacock, Lititz, manages the feed programs for Hostetter Management at all locations.

But quality remains key — to the product and to the environment.

"We want to do more as a company to establish a high standard," said Hostetter. "Our philosophy is to produce a quality product that people want to eat but not at the risk of raping the environment and not at the risk of our natural resources. That's all part of a good program."

FARM FORUM

Sustainable forestry means managing our forests to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs by practicing a land stewardship ethic which integrates the growing, nurturing, and harvesting of trees for useful products with the conservation of soil, air, and water quality, and wildlife and fish habitat.

On Sept. 13, 1960, President Eisenhower signed Public Law 86-753 establishing the third week of October as National Forest Products Week. Each year since, the President has issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the U.S. to observe the week with appropriate activities.

This year, National Forest Products Week is Oct. 19-25.

Anyone who has ever written a letter or received one, anyone who has ever enjoyed the music of a violin, anyone who has ever ordered from a catalogue, or anyone who has ever read a book should spend a little time thinking about what their lives would be like without paper or wood products.

Think about all of the forest products that integrate our lives: from the first tissue to wipe a baby's bottom, the books we study in school, the house in which we raise our families, the cellulose in the bread we eat, the newspaper which provides daily information, on to the casket which may one day be our final resting place.

Think about the people who own the forest. In Pennsylvania, 500,000 private landowners own 75 percent of the commercial woodland. Because of their investment and stewardship, all Pennsylvanians can enjoy the benefits these forests provide — useful products, cleaner and cooler air, soil and water protection, wildlife habitat, and recreational opportunities.

Think about the forest industry in Pennsylvania — 88,000 jobs at 2,400 locations, 10 percent of the state's manufacturing workforce, and an annual payroll exceeding $2 billion. The industry provides a marketplace for the half million forest landowners to the tune of $380 million per year.

As you enjoy the colorful fall forest foliage, everyone can find something to celebrate during National Forest Products. Week.

Julie assists sewers with a project during one of her sessions.

Julie Wegelin designed and stitched the quilted dress she is wearing and the one on the left, which has been selected to appear in a national quilt show in California.

Julie Wegelin Opens Sewing Cellar

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Julie Wegelin's Sewing Cellar is proof that home sewing is not a dying art nor is interest in home sewing dwindling.

In a cellar beneath her Reading urban home, Julie teaches sewing lessons ranging from basic tailoring to bear making. She teaches 13 classes weekly.

She also designs patchwork clothing patterns that she sells privately and in a few specialty shops.

Julie's vibrant enthusiasm for sewing shines through as she offers help to those participating in her sewing classes.

Julie began sewing Barbie doll clothing at five years of age. By fourth grade, she was sewing her own clothing.

Her sewing expertise at such a young age is all the more amazing because Julie said that she had a severe learning disability in reading and spelling.

She couldn't read, but learned to stitch together clothing by looking at the illustrations on the pattern sheet. When puzzled, she asked her mother to read the instructions aloud. Although her mother sewed very little, she encouraged Julie to sew and patiently read the pattern instructions whenever needed.

"I sewed all the time," Julie said of her growing-up years in upstate New York. The family moved to Berks County when Julie was in 11th grade. By then, Julie had completed all her graduation requirements in subjects other than English. To her delight, she was allowed to take sewing classes five periods a day during her junior and senior years.

Julie offers both open sewing classes where sewers select a project of their choice and classes where everyone works on the same project such as this creative vest.

She overcame her learning disability enough to make straight A's except in English through high school and at Harcum Junior College, where she studied fashion design.

At college she learned to take ideas and put them into pattern form. Most of her sewing efforts were in tailoring and in bridal wear for other people.

"Quilting didn't interest me back then. I thought it a bit silly to cut fabric into small pieces and put it together again," Julie said.

Four years ago, Julie made a patchwork quilt. She loved it so much that she came up with several ideas for incorporating patchwork into clothing. Often she uses checkerboard squares, diamonds, and prairie points at the hems and borders. The dress patterns range in size from petite to 2x, but are designed to fit loosely to eliminate fitting problems..

Blue jean patchwork is popular with her clientele. Julie designed a vest and a "barn jacket" made out of old jeans and formed into a patchwork pattern using the strip quilting method.

"The nice thing about people taking my classes is that no two projects ever look the same because people add some of their own ideas and they use differents shades of jeans," Julie said. "I could never imagine all the possibilities myself."

She sells several dress styles under her pattern label. Two of Julie's sample dresses were selected to appear in a national quilt show in California.

Julie married in 1983, and the couple now have five children ranging in ages from 18 months to 14 years. Since Julie teaches so many sewing classes, her husband prepares the meals and the children do much of the cleaning and laundry.

Julie only began her business in January. "I picked something that I was good at and started a business," she said.

In the areas with which she needed help to continue a successful business, she relied upon outside help. She said that the Berks County Penn State Cooperative Extension office was helpful in teaching her how to set up the business and in managing and marketing. Four times a year, Julie publishes a 16-page newsletter called "The Sewing Gazette," which carries up-to-date information on sewing equipment, new items to make sewing easier, sewing hints, a list of workshops, and other helpful information.

Julie is a bit amazed at the popularity of her courses, which now demand 13 classes weekly. In addition to teaching in the home, she also teaches classes at several sewing centers and fabric shops.

This barn jacket is made from different denim shades of old jeans and sewn on a serger. Julie designed the pattern, which can be purchased from her and made at home or made during one of her sewing classes.

In open sewing classes, each person selects their own sewing project. Julie limits class sizes to six persons since she gives individual attention to each.

If you are interested in more information about classes, new original patchwork patterns designed by Julie Wegelin, or "The Sewing Gazette", send for a catalog: Julie Wegelin's Sewing Cellar, 945 N. Forth St., Reading, PA 19601 or call (610) 376-3490. E-mail: jwsewingcellar@juno.com.

Communicate. Communicate. Communicate.

If you've ever heard, read, attended, or participated in any sort of motivational or leadership training, you've probably been reminded repeatedly about how important it is to communicate. By communicating, we learn, share, instruct, dialog with one another, (sometimes irritate one another) and just generally connect-the-dots of information we need to get along with one another through life.

Did the caveman start it with grunts and grumbles that evolved into a language of sorts? Then some artistic early human ancester took this communication stuff a bit farther and scratched crude drawings on the sides of caves to share information. A diary or account of some particularly-momentous occasion? The first version of a billboard? Or early mankind's equivalent of the reminder note on the refrigerator?

Whatever. We've come a long way from there, baby, runinng the gamut of increasing sophistication, from smoke signals to the first printed page to today's instant electronic conversation.

E-mail. If you have it and use it, you probably love it. If you don't, you likely fall into one of two categories: just haven't gotten around to it yet, or absolutely, positively, want nothing to do with it.

I became an e-mail enthusiast the first time a return message downloaded from somewhere in the electronic innards of a bank of computers humming away in Outer Mongolia. Or wherever. And, among the more serious contacts from family, friends, and business associates regularly come day-brighteners from fellow e-mailers with whacky senses of humor. Like these "groaner" one-liners that recently turned up on my monitor screen and seemed worth sharing:

- Everyone has a photographic memory. Some just don't have film.

- A clean desk is a sign of a cluttered desk drawer.

- If you choke a Smurf, what color does it turn?.

- A day without sunshine is like night.

-There are three kinds of people: those who can count and those who can't.

- Energizer Bunny arrested, charged with battery.

- Chocolate: the OTHER food group. (My personal motto.)

- I poured Spot remover on my dog. Now he's gone.

- I couldn't repair your brakes so I made your horn louder.

- How do you tell when you run out of invisible ink?

- Artificial intelligence is no match for natural stupidity.

- I used to be indecisive... now I'm not sure.

- Why do psychics have to ask you for your name?

- For Sale: Parachute. Only used once, never opened, small stain.

- How does Teflon stick to the pan?

- OK, so what's the speed of dark?

- Corduroy pillows - they're making headlines.

- Laughing stock: cattle with a sense of humor.

While I love the concept of e-mail, the early-morning, still-half-asleep time of day that I like to use it will discourage my interest in moving up to the next step, one of those built-in computer video cameras for transmitting electronic, face-to-face conversations.

Some things are just better left uncommunicated.

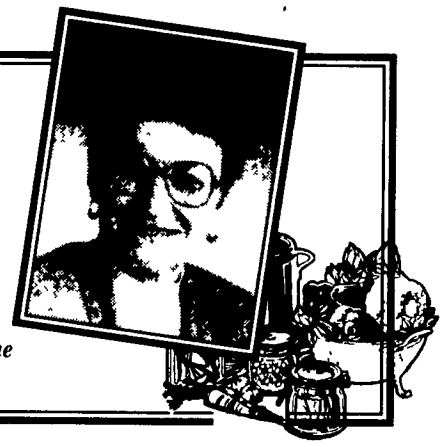
Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Halloween has become a special occasion that brings out the kid in all of us. It's fun to get dressed up in a strange costume and parade around the neighborhood or go to a special party. Treats are a part of that fun. But "treats" don't have to mean sticky gooey candy.

This year when you buy treats to hand out to the little ghosts and goblins that knock on your doors, think beyond the traditional candy bars, suckers and gum to the variety of non -sweet and non-edible treats now available. All sorts of miniature toys, stickers and non-food favors can be found amidst the candy bars and suckers in the Halloween treat section of your local supermarket or department store.

Choose one of these or use them as a springboard for other possibilities throughout the store. Examples of non-food items that make great Halloween treats include balloons, crayons, pencils, stickers, colored chalk, erasers, whistles, miniature plastic animals, miniature cars, packages of baseball cards, and rubber spiders or worms.

Offering non-food treats benefits not only the Halloween doorbell ringer but the treater as well. Why? Because there is no leftover candy sitting around giving out "eat me before I spoil" messages. Any favors not given out can simply be boxed up and stored for next year's trick-or-treaters.

If the idea of non-food treats does not suit your fancy, at least consider offering a non-sweet alternative. Some examples include cheese and cracker packages, sugar-free gum, cheese sticks, individually wrapped sticks of beef jerky, juice box packages, small packages of nuts or raisins and coupons good at local fast-food establishments. Or, on chilly Halloween nights, what would be more welcome than a package of instant cocoa mix? Once home, it could be combined with hot water to help "wash down" other treats received.

Parties are another solution. Today, many parents hold Halloween parties for their children instead of sending them out trick-or-treating. Some nutritious treats to serve at these parties are plain or cheese-coated popcorn, not-too-sweet cookies, apples, grapes, bananas and other fresh fruit, unshelled peanuts and "witch's brew" made with orange juice, lemonade and apple cider.

Older children might enjoy roasted pumpkin seeds. They are easy to prepare and readily available. Simply remove the seeds from the inside of your pumpkin that you use for "carving" a jack-o-lantern. Rinse two cups of pumpkin seeds until the pulp and strings are detached. Boil the seeds in six cups water with one teaspoon salt added. Boil for ten minutes.

Drain and dry seeds on paper towels. In a bowl add one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, three tablesppoons melted butter or margarine. Add pumpkin seeds and stir well. Spread on baking sheet.

Bake at 225° for one to two hours. Stir occasionally and watch for burning seeds. Seeds should be crisp when fully baked. Store in an air tight container.

Consider "pizza faces" for a more substantial snack children can help prepare. Let your party-goers create their own faces by arranging sliced olives, green peppers, mushrooms, pepperoni and other ingredients on English muffins that have been brushed with tomato sauce. Add a little grated chese for "hair" and pop in the oven or microwave for a treat that's as good to eat as it is fun to make.

Halloween does not have be synonymous with candy. This year, why not break the sweet-teeth witch routine and fill your trick-or-treaters' sacks with all sorts of non-sticky and non-food treats.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 20

On Thursday, October 2, Farm Women #20 met at the Community Center in the Medical Center Building with Vivian Hess and Jean Ressel entertaining. Following the refreshments Jean read the Scripture from the Book of Micah and after a corresponding reading read the poem "Autumn." The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison followed by repeating the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

The president, Marie Foose, presided at the business meeting. The Roll Call was answered by naming the Township in which one votes.

The Sunshine Committee reported two cards sent.

Some of the members will be attending Farm Women's Day at Willow Valley on October 14 and the delegates for the County Convention are Freda Wimer, Marie Foose, and Anna Mary Groff. The Christmas committee consists of Vera Herr, Leora Johnson, Helen Harnish and Barbara Stone. The nominating committee reported Marie Foose, president; Valaria Ferguson, vice president; Anna Mary Groff, recording secretary; Vera Herr, treasurer, and Dorothy Eckman, corresponding secretary. The meeting closed by singing "Brighten the Corner." The next meeting is in November at the home of Dorothy Crawford with Pauline Reinhart as co-hostess.

Berks Society 3

Berks Group #3 of the Society of Farm Women took a trip to Peddler's Village and the house of Pearl S. Buck, author, in August. Members also enjoyed lunch at the Cock 'N Bull at Peddler's Village.

Our meeting in September was at the home of Mary Bartholomew's house for a mystery dinner. The dinner was ham, green beans, corn, carrots, celery, apple cider, bread, butter and ice cream and applesauce, cake for dessert.

American Lamb: A Healthy Choice

Today's lamb is rich in nutrients, yet leaner and lower in calories and cholesterol than ever before.

American lamb is a prime source of high quality protein, vitamins, and minerals. Its protein is nutritionally complete with all eight essential amino acids in the proper ratio. Lamb is also high in B vitamins, niacin, zinc, and iron. In fact, 57 percent of the iron is more usable in the body than the iron found in most other foods.

Compared to other meats, lamb contains very little marbling (internal fat throughout the meat). Since most of the fat that lamb does have is on the outside edges, it's easily trimmed. That means fewer calories—only 176 in an average 3-ounce serving, or 7 percent of the average daily caloric intake recommended for a 23-50 year old.

LAMB CHOPS MARINADE

1 cup fruit juice (any flavor)
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup soy sauce
½ teaspoon dry mustard
4-6 lamb chops

Mix together all ingredients. Pour mixture over chops in shallow dish. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Drain lamb, reserving marinade. Grill and glaze chops with remaining marinade.

¼ cup coarsely chopped almonds or peanuts, optional

Slice lamb in ¼ -inch strips and set aside. Heat oil and garlic to medium high heat in large skillet or wok. Add lamb and stir and fry until lamb is no longer pink. Remove from skillet and set aside.

Break up dry noodles and place noodles, 1 cup water, flavor packet and vegetables in skillet. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and cover. Simmer 3-5 minutes until vegetables are crisp tender. Stir in lamb strips, sweet and sour sauce and oranges. Heat through. Top with nuts if desired.

Featured Recipe

If you are inquisitive but not quite certain how to prepare lamb, then today's lamb recipes are for you.

American lamb is tender, tasty, and moist—not at all like the tough mutton served in other countries.

Here are several recipes from Nancy Kerr, who served as Greene County Lamb and Wool Queen from 1992-1995.

LAMB CASSEROLE SUPREME

1 pound ground lamb
¼ cup chopped sweet pepper
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups zucchini
3 cups quartered tomatoes
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon oregano
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup kernel corn

Brown meat, onion, and pepper with oregano, salt, and pepper. Place zucchini and corn in greased 2½ -quart casserole. Add browned lamb mixture, then top with tomatoes. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour and 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Top with parmesan cheese at serving time.

Note: you can cut baking time by precooking zucchini and corn before adding to casserole. Bake 30 mintes at 375 degrees. Serves 6.

LAMBURGER IN A PAN

1½ pounds ground lamb
16-ounces whole tomatoes
2 tablespoons mint
Salt, pepper to taste
2 medium onions, sliced
6 tablespoons parsley
4 medium potatoes, sliced
Butter

Mix ground lamb with parsley and seasonings to taste. Spread out in buttered 9x12-inch baking pan, patting down evenly and firmly. Place potatoes and onions over meat. Cut tomatoes, spread evenly, and pour liquid in can over all ingredients in pan. Sprinkle top with mint and dot with butter. Bake 30-35 minutes at 350 degrees. This dish can be made and stored in your refrigerator overnight. Serves 4.

Planing For Holiday Spending

The holiday shopping season will soon begin. For many consumers, that means trouble.

Already overextended with credit card borrowing and other debt, too many consumers spend way beyond their means during the holidays. When January rolls around, they're left with a hangover of unpaid bills and unhappy creditors.

Here are some common-sense tips on avoiding post-holiday financial blues.

• Make a budget and stick to it.

Figure out how much you can reasonably afford to spend. One way is by listing your income from wages and investments, and then subtracting your regular minimum monthly expenses, such as rent or mortgage payments, food, auto loan payments, insurance and utility bills. What's left is discretionary income that you could use for holiday spending.

Once you figure out how much you can afford, make a list of those you will give to and the amounts per person. Take the list with you when you go shopping. If you spend less on one person, you can spend more on another.

Shop for bargains but resist the temptation to spend more than your total.

Don't go shopping at the last minute; that causes impulse buying.

• Recognize the warning signs of too much debt.

You have no business increasing your borrowing at all if you fit any of the following conditions: your payments are always late and you are constantly receiving collection notices from creditors; you are constantly taking cash advances on your credit card; you are opening up more credit cards just to pay off debts on other cards; you are using savings to pay basic monthly bills such as rent or utilities; your savings total less than two to three months of take-home pay; or you use more than 20 percent of your take-home pay to pay monthly non-mortgage installment debts such as car payments and credit card bills.

If you meet any of these conditions, it's time to cut back on your debts — not add to them.

• Understand the costs of credit card promotions and gimmicks.

Many issuers offer "skip payment" options where you don't have to pay every month. Sounds great. But finance charges will generally continue to accrue during the months you don't pay. The same is often true of deferred-payment offers where you don't have to pay for several months.

• Consider alternatives to borrowing and spending.

Use cash. At least you can only spend what you have or go on a holiday savings program. Figure out what you spend on the holiday and make it a point to save a one-twelfth of that amount each month during the year.

Also, the best gifts are not necessarily the most expensive — or ones that you buy. Holiday presents that you make, like baked goods, show thoughtfulness and "can be just as appreciated as any you purchase.

• Beware of credit scams.

Holidays make wonderful times for credit scam artists. You should offer your credit card for identification but refuse to allow merchants to write your card numbers down on checks; destroy carbon; check billing statements carefully for purchases you didn't make or that were never delivered and write your card issuer immediately to dispute such charges; never give your card number over the phone unless you're certain that the company is reputable; and keep your card in view when you give it to sales clerks to prevent them from making extra imprints.

• Know what to do if you get into trouble.

Contact your creditors. They can often help you work out a more manageable repayment schedule.

Your county cooperative extension office has "Take Control of Your Money" booklets that can be helpful in your planning process and they're FREE.

Fall Care for Houseplants

Houseplants and especially certain foliage plants make great greenery for the home. I prefer interior plants requiring little care. Small, upright plants include aloe, aluminum plant, snake plant, and Kalanchoe. Wandering Jew, heart leaf philodendron, and grape ivy make great hanging baskets. Use the peace lily, ribbon plant, yucca cane, ponytail plant, and crown of thorns as floor specimens and bromeliads for a table.

Plants labeled as cacti or succulents come in various sizes and shapes. Most prefer infrequent watering in the fall and winter, lots of light and a cool room (45-60°F). Try one of the following: old man cactus, peruvian apple cactus, rabbit's ears cactus, chinese jade, bishop's cap, or fishhook cactus.

The Schefflera is an indoor tree used by interior decorators. Although it blooms in subtropical gardens, it rarely blooms under normal room conditions. It's easy to grow provided it is kept moderately warm (not less than 55°F) and is protected from cold draughts. It can reach 6 feet or more but tends to become lanky with age due to the loss of lower leaves. It prefers bright light but away from direct sunshine. Water sparingly in winter and liberally in spring, summer and fall. Leaves require frequent misting.

Research indicates spider mites (a major insect pest) on Schefflera increase at a faster rate on plants that lack adequate soil moisture. To reduce moisture stress, always re-water plants by completely saturating the soil.

For houseplants in general, watering on the same day of the week is not proper watering. Some plants require water every 3 to 4 days in fall and winter while others not more than every 8-10 days. Plants use much less water in cooler months if temperatures are maintained below 55 degrees. If plants are only attended to on the weekends, a good deep soaking is recommended. Avoid letting excess water standing in the saucers.

Light and low humidity are other limiting factors for growing houseplants in the fall. Choose plants that are happy with low light while demanding little care. Most plants thrive as long as the roots are kept moist.

The Chinese Evergreen can grow directly in water. It prefers warm temperatures, about 70°F. The cast-iron plant grows as an expanding clump about 18 inches tall. Holly Fern does best in the shadowless light of a north window. It prefers cool temperatures from 50 to 55°F. It is a very durable fern with dark green leaflets having toothed edges.

The Nerve Plant prefers warm room temperatures but is very sensitive to drafts. Provide additional humidity. It does well in a terrarium. White flag or snowflower even prefers warm room temperatures and lots of humidity. It flowers in medium light.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717)840-7408.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKWOOD (Somerset Co.) — Sheep provide us with many good things. Lamb to eat as meat and clothing made from wool are the more commonly known items.

But, did you know that soap, gum, glue, candles, and buttons are made from sheep products?

And, guess what—even marshmallows have sheep gelatin in them.

Toothbrushes, tissues, and photographic film are only a few of the hundreds of items made from sheep byproducts.

Heidi Svonavec and her brother Gabe raise sheep on their farm in Rockwood. They love sheep and are proud to raise animals that contribute so many good things for us to use.

Heidi and Gabe want others to know how important sheep are to our society. Heidi, 17, and Gabe, 10, are always thinking up novel ways to tell others about sheep. Heidi is both the Somerset County and the Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen. She designed an activity booklet called "Fun With The Flock." Some of the pages from her booklet are reproduced on this page.

Fun With The Flock

Sometimes Gabe dresses up like a lamb and hands out items made from sheep products. His mother made the lamb costume.

"It's hot," Gabe says when he wears it.

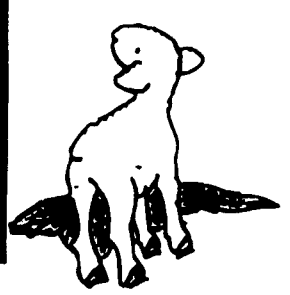
But he sure gets the attention of the crowd. And, people are always glad for a piece of gum, candy, or a toothbrush from the basket Gabe carries.

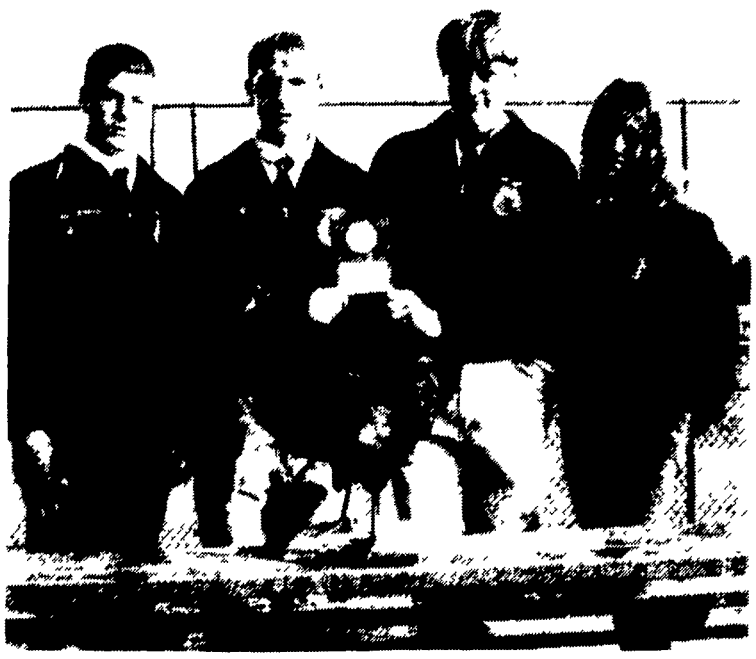
Heidi also hands out recipes using lamb and often prepares a lamb dish for people to taste at fairs and other events where she appears.

"Remember, you probably couldn't get through the day if it weren't for sheep," Heidi said. "Not if you didn't want to be caught with your pants down."

She said that because buttons and fasteners are made from the bones of sheep.

Heidi, Gabe, and their parents, Dave and Betty Lou Svonavec, hope you enjoy these activities from Heidi's booklet.





Elizabethtown FFA

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The Elizabethtown FFA Poultry Judging Team placed 1st at the 76th annual Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Mass. in national eastern competition.

The team consisting of John Mower, Ladd Robinson, Josh Thomas, and Denise Bollinger, represented Pennsylvania. They competed against 11 other state teams from the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic. Denise Bollinger placed 2nd individually and John Mowrer placed 7th.

This career development event included the activities in poultry production, processing, marketing, and consumption of poultry products. Evaluation of live birds, ready to cook broilers, parts identification, egg grading, and merchandising were stimulated. This team did not touch a live bird because of the avian flu.

Team members earned the right to represent Pennsylvania by placing 2nd at state FFA competition this past summer.

Linesville FFA'er Wins Award

Carleen Vorisek, 17, a member of Linesville FFA, recently won a national proficiency award for beekeeping. Carleen is the daughter of Charles and Catherine Vorisek, Linesville. She is a senior at Linesville High School.

Carleen began her FFA career in the 8th grade under the direction of adviser Ellen Aurand. In the winter of 1994, Carleen and her father prepared for a beekeeping enterprise. She became interested in beekeeping after her father had been to the University of Maryland earlier in the summer and had seen the University's apiary.

Both attended the Western Pennsylvania Beekeeping Seminary. Carleen believes that the seminar was the point where her interest turned to motivation.

When Carleen first started beekeeping, her goals were to learn about bees and how important bees are to agriculture. She also wanted to learn about and produce different honeys, honey products, and by-products such as wax. By this time, her objective was to be competent in handling and managing honey bee colonies.

Carleen wanted to have 8 to 10 colonies. Her most important objective was to make this enterprise pay off.

Despite her preparation, Carleen lost eight colonies in one winter because of poor colony health, mites, and an extremely long winter. However, even the professionals had big losses that winter.

Carleen has three strong colonies and two packages ordered. Everything looks to be profitable and she still has her senior year to go.

Carleen's goals are to further her education toward a marketing or business degree. She would like to be able to work with agriculture. She enjoys agriculture and believes in its benefits to the environment and economy.

FFA Leaders with a Vision

New FFA Center

Thirteen FFA chapters from around Pennsylvania have left a lasting mark on the new FFA Center in Indianapolis, Ind., by purchasing a brick engraved with the chapter's name to be used in the walkway to the center.

The Pennsylvania FFA Association has congratulated the following chapters that have contributed $150 toward the "I Believe in the Future" Capital Campaign: Bucks County FFA, Central Columbia FFA, Chestnut Ridge FFA, Coudersport Spud Growers, Elizabethtown FFA, Kutztown FFA, Mifflinburg FFA, Monroe FFA, Newport FFA, Northwest FFA, Red Lion Area FFA, Somerset FFA, and the West Greene FFA chapters.

More than 300 chapters have purchased bricks and 12 state associations have made commitments to the campaign, with more expected in the coming months. All chapters and teams that had contributed by Oct. 3 will be recognized at the 1997 National FFA Convention in Kansas City.

The FFA is a national organization for high school students that prepares them for careers in agricultural science, business, and technology. It announced last September that it would move its 80-employee business and foundation offices to Indianapolis from Alexandria, Va., and Madison, Wis.

The total goal for the campaign — which takes its theme, "I Believe in the Future," from the FFA Creed — is $8 million to provide for the land, building, move, technology, and other elements necessary to make the center a reality, and for an endowment to help maintain the center into the future. The National FFA Foundation, Inc., expects to receive $5 million from corporate and foundation sponsors and $3 million from the sale of FFA's land in Virginia and contributions from FFA members, chapters, alumni staff, as well as other individuals.

FFA has now raised more than $2 million, including leadership gifts from American Cyanamid, John Deere, The Lilly Endowment, DowElanco, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, and The Eli Lilly and Company Foundation on behalf of Elanco Animal Health.

"We are grateful to our sponsors who are helping us take this important step toward ensuring the success of agricultural education in the future, just as they have long supported programs and activities for our members," said Corey Rosenbusch, national FFA president. "At the same time, we know the FFA members who will benefit from the new center will want to show their support."

The new site is on five acres of land near 86th Street and Interstate 465 in Indianapolis, purchased at a reduced price from longtime FFA sponsor, The Dow Chemical Company. FFA held a groundbreaking ceremony April 21. Construction will begin shortly and is expected to be completed by spring 1998. The FFA headquarters will remain a part of the U.S. Department of Education in the Washington, D.C., area.

Attractive Table Settings, Food Garnishing Makes Guests Feel Special

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — When Nancy Crago and Fay Strickler visited Poland, they were amazed at the elaborate table settings, the beautifully garnished foods, and the gracious hospitality extended to them.

The two women were part of a cooperative extension exchange program between the two countries. Recently, 10 Polish home economists came to Berks County, where they demonstrated salad dishes and table settings that are part of the Polish culure.

"We have centuries of receiving guests with total hospitality," Joanna Bieganska said. "We believe feasting together establishes close relationships."

Whether the meal is lavish or modest, the Polish believe that even the most humble meal when served attractively and nicely garnished adds to the atmosphere.

Garnishing foods with tomatoes carved into roses and sweet peppers formed into colorful designs is such a part of the average homemaker that the Polish entourage seemed surprised that Americans would be interested in learning those techniques.

Because they learn garnishing at a young age, the women speed through the process with ease, unlike their American counterparts who view garnishing as a time-consuming process.

Slides of table settings were shown to the audience of 80 gathered at the Berks County Extension office last Wednesday evening.

The Polish people find many occasions to celebrate and have select colors to use at many of them. For example, religious holidays and first communion celebrations are held where the tables are set with white lines, white china, and crystal stemware. Pink and white colors are used for wedding celebrations.

Innovative table settings are used for parties and for serving coffee. "Coffee drinking is popular and we serve it two or three times daily," Urszula Gatarek said. "We think nice surroundings add to the atmosphere."

Pictures from their countries showed suppers by candlelight, and flower centerpieces matching the colors of tablecloths and china.

Cloth napkins are folded in numerous ways, such as in boat-shapes for a children's party, and at Easter the napkins are folded into an envelope-style with a decorated Easter egg tucked into them.

The Polish exchange was made up of rural household specialists, which is the equivalent of what is called family consumer science agents or home economists in America.

For more than 20 years, the Polish extension office has been running a program to encourage people to eat more fruits and vegetables. Their primary focus is with the youth and ages. Children are shown how to mince vegetables and to prepare many of the dishes that follow.

Home economists from Poland demonstrate one of the many ways to set an attractive table for dinner guests.

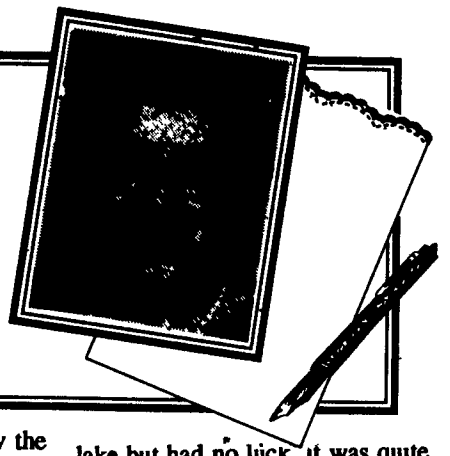
Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



The warm days that follow the first frost are called "Indian Summer." We have tried to take advantage of these days of summer-like temperatures.

My husband has been picking up black walnuts to help the youth programm at our church. He is able to sell them for nine cents a pound after they are hulled by the purchaser. He has his own huller, which he and his brother made last winter. It does a very good job but it is quite noisy.

One day last week we took our boat to Blue Marsh for fishing. we tried many locations on the big lake but had no luck. It was quite windy and the boat rocked continually. Finally, as we considered giving up and going home, I said, "Get the net." I got a 14-inch fish. One fish is better than none.

A few evenings later I took our almost four-year-old grandson fishing in the Conestoga River. The river is on three sides of our farm and so we can walk to it. This time luck was with us as we got a nice-sized fish as soon as the line hit the water. We caught eight in an hour but only kept four of them. Every time we got a small one Gregory wanted to keep it but I persuaded him to throw it back.

Our yellow and our red raspberries are giving us enough to share with others. Our beans are almost finished but there are lots of heads of cabbage for slaw in the garden. I have picked all of the big, yellow quinces off of our littel trees. They are something that I remember my grandmother canning long ago.

I've been putting off the job of bringing in my houseplants. But, I know the pleasant weather won't last and then I'll have to do a hurried job of transplanting them.

Pork Getting Leaner

DES MOINES, Iowa — Eight cuts of fresh pork carry even less external fat, yield more lean meat, and contain lower fat and cholesterol levels than they did eight years ago, according to a new Supermarket Meat Case Study conducted at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

The follow-up study revealed that the amount of pork's external fat has significantly declined since the first Supermarket Meat Case Study conducted in 1989. The pork checkoff-funded study also showed that the percentage yield of raw pork, trimmed of external fat, increased from 75 percent to 81 percent, which means more pork per cut.

"Pork Producers are continuing to deliver the type of product consumers are demanding," said Dennis Buege, extension meat specialist at the University of Wisconsin in Madison and study coordinator. "Fresh retail pork has maintained its lean composition — with a slight trend toward being even leaner," he said. "Not only has the nutritional value of pork improved over the years, but the economic value has increaed due to a greater yield of lean meat," Buege said.

The study confirmed that pork has parity with chicken in terms of nutritional content. When the average fat content from all the pork cuts was compared to the average fat content of all the chicken cuts, pork had only one more gram of fat. A summary of white meat trends unveiled by the study includes:

• Fresh retail pork has maintained its lean composition established 20 years ago, with a slight trend toward being even leaner.

• Pork cuts contain about a third less cholesterol than chicken.

• On average, there is only one gram of fat difference between the trimmed pork cuts and the skinless chicken cuts.

• The fat content of skinless chicken is higher than reported in the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) current database.

"For consumers, the results of the study are very encouraging," says Ceci Snyder, R.D., and Health Care Communications Manager for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC). "They now have a variety of lean meats to choose from, including eight cuts of lean pork."

The study is a follow-up to the 1990 Pork Markeet Basket Study. Funded by NPPC, the purpose of the study was to audit the nutrient composition of fresh pork cuts in the retail grocery case, looking for any significant change from date gathered in 1989.

The original study was intended to update the USDA's benchmark data on pork to more accurately reflect the production of leaner pork by U.S. producers, officials said.

ANSWER — J.R. Hohmeier of Painter, Va., wants a recipe for making Farmer cheese without rennet. Thanks to a reader for sending the following recipe.

Farmer's Cheese

Heat 2 gallons milk (cow's or goat's) in a stainless steel kettle to 180 degrees. If you have no thermometer, heat until scalding, but do not boil. Remove from heat and add about ½ cup vinegar until it separates while stirring.

Pour cheese into a colander lined with cheesecloth and set on a pail (liquid will go into the pail).

Mix 2½ teaspoons and salt into the curds in the colander and gather the corners of the cheesecloth. Lift from the colander and set a coffee can, with both ends cut out into the colander. Place cheese cloth filled with cheese into coffee can. Fill a 2-quart jar with water to use as a weight and set on top of cheese. Leave set about three hours to cure on a platter or eat immediately.

Variation: Add dried ground jalapeno peppers or for a more flavored cheese, use aged milk or buttermilk.

For cottage cheese, drain after the curd separates.

ANSWER — Here is a spaghetti pie recipe from Amy Habecker, Lebanon Co. Dairy Maid.

Cook and drain spaghetti. Mix with butter and parmesan cheese (can add two beaten eggs).

Form into crust in greased 10-inch pie plate. Spread cottage cheese over bottom of spaghetti crust. Cook ground beef, add sauce on top of cottage cheese.

Option 1: top with mozzarella cheese and bake covered for 30 minutes at 350 degrees, uncover, and bake 5-10 minutes longer.

Option 2: Bake uncovered for 25-30 minutes at 350 degrees then top with cheese and bake 5-10 minutes longer.

QUESTION — Jerry Deardorff, York Springs, would like to know where to find a 6½ -inch headlight lens for a 1940 9N Ford tractor. They're bigger than 8N Ford lights. He's also interested in finding information on a Ford 9N club.

ANSWER — Betty Jakum, Littlestown, had questions concerning homemade sauerkraut. Thanks to Fran Westfall, Newelkford, for sending the following infromation and recipe, which she has used for 25 years. She writes that her daughter-in-law made some this year that did not turn straw color, but the family has used several jars and it tastes good.

Sauerkraut turns pink depending upon the yeast that forms in the mixture. It may become discolored if the salt is not evenly distributed, if too much salt is used, or if the cabbage is too loosely packed.

Soft sauerkraut is caused by too low salt content or high temperatures during curing. Unclean containers and improper packing of sauerkraut can also be the cause.

Sauerkraut turns slimy from certain bacteria that may flourish or if not enough salt is used and the temperatures are too high.

Sauerkraut darkens if cabbage is not properly cleaned, uneven salting, or high curing.

To much salt prevents fermentation.

Prevent the formation of a white film by covering sauerkraut and adjusting the weights so very little kraut juice or kraut is exposed to the air. This treatment discourages the growth of yeast.

Stone-Jar Sauerkraut

Prepare 40 to 50 pounds cabbage. Shred and salt five pounds cabbage at a time.

To make 5 pounds cabbage, add 3½ tablespoons salt. Mix thoroughly.

Pack firmly and evenly with a potato masher into a stone jar or crock that has been washed in soapy water, rinsed, and scalded.

Repeat shredding and salting cabbage until jar is filled to witin 5-inches from top. Press firmly (do not pound) with masher to extract enough juice to cover cabbage by the time jar is filled. Keep cabbage covered with juice.

Cover with two or three layers of white, clean cloth, tucking edges down against inside of jar. On top, place a scalded, heavy plates that just fits the inside of the jar. Weight it down with a fruit jar filled with water so that juice comes over the plate.

Fermentation will begin the day following the packing. It works faster at high temperatures and the kraut is more likely to spoil at a high temperature. The best quality product is made at room temperature.

Give the kraut daily care. Remove the film as it forms and was and scald the cover cloth as often as necessary to remove mold and film.

When bubbling stops in 2 or 3 weeks—or 4 weeks in cold weather) tap jar or crock gently. If no bubbles rise, fermentation has ended.

Pack into clean quart jars to withing 1-inch of top. Cover with sauerkraut juice. If you need more juice, add a weak brine (1½ tablespoon salt to 1 quart water). Set jars in a pan of cold water. Water should extend to shoulder of jars. Bring water slowly to a boil; remove jars. Wipe off jar rims. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath 30 minutes for quart jars.

Remove jars from canner and complete seals unless closures are self-sealing type. Makes 15 to 18 quarts.

Note: If you eat sauerkraut often and will use your supply before winter ends, it will hold in the stone jar in a cold room (55 degrees or lower).

Lancaster Society 14

The May 13th meeting of the Society of Farm Women #14 was at the Cloisters of Ephrata.

On June 11, members arrived at the Farm & Home Center with a variety of dishes for a luncheon for the entertainment of Society #22. Hostesses Viola Hostetter, Eileen McComas and Mildred Herr greeted the guests and arranged seating: pairing members and the guests by matching slips of paper featuring presidents and wives. Members were taken on a tour throughout the West by the way of a slide presentation given by Pearl Geeisey.

On a hot, hot day in July the Society met at the home of Ellen Newswanger. Hostesses Gladys Esbenshade and Janet leaman served a refreshing hot weather treat. Roll call response to "What was the most joyful moment of your life?" gave glimpses into precious moments of our lives. The program was a time of Show & Tell Stories of antique items brought by members: concluding with Ellen's show of interesting items. Many of her items are found at garage sales as she and Everett take to the road on their bicycles. She told of how their avid joy for riding takes them to different states to participate in organized riding excursions.

The annual picnic time at the Strasburg Tinney Pavilion came on a beautiful summer evening, Aug. 15. Hostesses Mary Dietzel, Ruth Kreider, Rhoda Landis, and Jean Groff were busy arranging all the food carried in by members, and supplying refreshing lemonade and iced tea. Since Glenn and Narci Herr wer present with his parents, he was asked to give an update on Hong Kong's recent change. The Herrs have served there for the past 17 years. From Hong Kong, members toured Europe with Sam Kauffman, of the Kauffman Fruit Farm family. His slides took members to lands of beauty, to scenes of sad reminder of the Jewish Holocaust, to the Great Wall of separation and to the good sight of its no longer being there.

Producers Invest In Pork Industry's Futures

DES MOINES, Iowa — The nation's pork producers are investing $57 million this year in programs to strengthen the position of pork in the marketplace and to expand and develop markets for pork products in this country and foreign markets.

Producers selling breeding stock, feeder pigs or market hogs, as well as importers of hogs and pork products invest .45 of one percent of the market value (45 cents per $100 value) through the national legislative checkoff program. The program has proven quite successful in enabling the pork industry to move forward in generating greater product awareness, improving pork quality, and expanding pork sales domestically as well as abroad.

According to University of Missouri ag economist Glenn Grimes, demand for pork at the producer level in 1996 was 9 percent greater than in 1985. A good share of that demand increase was due to checkoff programming. Since 1987, U.S. world trade exports coupled with a decrease in the number of pork imports into the United States has had a $2 billion effect on producer income, or $2.35 per hog. Grimes said just one tenth of that would pay for the checkoff for four or five years.

The National Pork Board contracts with the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) to carry out specific promotion, research and consumer information programs.

NPPC coordinates national product promotion and marketing efforts in addition to production research and producer education projects. The checkoff program has enabled the pork industry to establish pork as a versatile, nutritious protein alternative to consumers, thanks to the highly successful Pork. The Other White Meat® national advertising campaign which includes network television, radio and magazine ads.

The message that today's pork is nutritious and versatile is being delivered to food editors, schools, health care professionals and restaurants across the United States on a year-round basis.

Checkoff funds are being invested in research and education programs in such areas as genetics, meat science, animal care, nutrition and the environment, in efforts to help producers remain competitive and profitable.

The U.S. Meat Export Federation assists NPPC in maintaining and developing foreign markets for U.S. pork.. Checkoff-funded pork promotions in foreign countries emphasize the United States as a reliable supplier of high-quality pork products.

Cooks Create New Recipes Using Jams And Jellies

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — In today's mass-produced marketplace, it's easy to see why Pat Burnley's Jam & Relish Kitchen at Kitchen Kettle Village attracts over a million visitors each year, and why loyal customers across the U.S. sparked a major mail order business. It's the only way they could order Pat's growing selection of all-natural jellies, relishes, butters and preserves, that are still made by local farm women — one small batch at a time.

This year, Pat has added a new twist to Kitchen Kettle's new fall '97 through spring '98 catalog, by spotlighting the wonderfully creative cooks at Kitchen Kettle who have invented many of the recipes that are featured in cookbooks — and the recipe cards that are included in every gift box. "Over the years we've tested hundreds of recipes, and find cooking with jams, jellies and relishes is not only easy and fun, it saves an unbelievable amount of time in the preparation. As ingredients our products are naturally nutritious, even healthy, because they retain the vitamins and minerals and contain no chemicals or preservatives. It really is a satisfying way to cook, that's completely in keeping with today's busy, contemporary lifestyles and the desire for 100 percent natural food products."

The Kitchen Kettle cooks, whose pictures and recipes are scattered throughout the catalog, have also helped launch new lines of salad dressings, barbecue sauces, fruit butters and syrups. New this year are two old-fashioned fruit toppings — Cherry Almond and Apple Raisin — that are great straight out of the jar (or first microwaved) over ice cream, yogurt, cheese cake, and most any pound cake. Also new this year is a Raspberry Applesauce, plus a line of "Jar Breads" (yes, they're actually baked in a jar to retain their fresh flavor) that include Pumpkin, Poppy Seed and Gingerbread.

The secret to Kitchen Kettle's success lies in the small-batch cooking method, and the emphasis on pure flavor. "For over 40 years I've refused to put the Kitchen Kettle name on anything that wasn't the purest, finest and tastiest we could offer," Pat explains. "There's an integrity to products that are made from all-natural ingredients, that are hand-stirred and slowly cooked to achieve peak flavor. And to ensure consistency, we only use stainless steel, double jacketed kettles — so the fruits and vegetables are never scorched. In fact, we still fill our relish jars by hand so the vegetables are evenly dispensed, and never bruised."

In any given season Kitchen Kettle puts up some 70 varieties, including traditional flavors like Tomato, Pepper and Cherry jams, Chow Chow, Corn Relish, and Pickled Watermelon Rind, newer additions like Garlic Herb Jelly, Pineapple Jam and Chili Sauce (some call it Amish catsup), plus a line of "all-fruit" spreads that are made with white grape juice instead of sugar. All can be ordered separately in half-pint or quart jars, or in special gift boxes and baskets along with serving tips and recipes.

In Lancaster County, the gift of food at Thanksgiving and Christmastime goes back at least 100 years, where the farm women would cook and bake for days, and the men would hitch up the sleighs and deliver baskets "filled to the brim" to family and friends. "It's a thoughtful tradition we proudly revive with a wonderful selection of theme baskets and boxes, that have been carefully selected to remain true to our local Pennsylvania Dutch traditions."

Among the most popular gift items are the Seven Sweets & Sours combination that celebrates the end of the garden, and the Bird-in-Hand Market Basket that also offers handmade pretzels, sweet bologna, dried corn and apple snitz in an old-fashioned Lancaster County "going to the market" basket.

Kitchen Kettle Village, located on Rt. 340 about 10 miles east of Lancaster, offers something to see and do for every member of the family. There are special festivals that involve the Village's 34 crafts, food and artisans' shops. During the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays the Village will be exquisitely decorated with trees, wreaths and elegant topiaries, and collages created from patterns of colorful ribbons (a heritage derived from local quilt makers). And the kids will love a Saturday visit with the Village's own Belsnickel (the 19th century forerunner to Santa Claus). There is no admission to the Village, and plenty of free parking is available on the Village grounds.

For more information on Kitchen Kettle Village, and a free copy of the new catalog, please call or write: Kitchen Kettle Village, P.O. Box 380, Intercourse, PA 17534. Telephone (800) 717-6198.

Kitchen Kettle founder Pat Burnley (center) always enjoys sharing new recipes that use jams, jellies and relishes as ingredients. In the new 1997-98 canning season catalog, Pat Shares the pages with some of her favorite cooks, including (from left), Louise Kitsch, Laura Reiff, Mel Hauser and Linda Carper — whose recipes have been gracing Kitchen Kettle's cookbooks for many years.

Keystone Ride

Laura Theurer, riding Magnolias Stormy from Harrisburg, won her division and was high point junior rider at the state 4-H competitive trail ride, the Keystone Ride.

Laura was also awarded first place for junior riders in the horsemanship judging of the ride. The Keystone Ride, which was held Sept. 20 at the Rothrock State Forest, is a 27 mile ride in which 4-H members and their parents from all over the state compete.

Laura and Stormy completed the ride in four hours and 51 minutes with a score of 98.5 Laura was placed first for horsemanship among junior riders. And this was their first official competitive ride.

Laura, 12, is in the 7th grade at Linglestown Jr. High. She is a member of Manestreamers On Top 4-H Horse and Pony Club and has been riding since she was two years old.

Laura won Stormy in an essay contest two years ago, when Stormy's former owner, Ted Christianson, donated her to Dauphin Co. 4-H Horse Clubs.

Magnolias Stormy is a 6-year-old purebred Grey Arabian. She was just four years old and green broke when Laura won her. Laura has done most of Stormy's training herself, with a little help from her parents, and they have proved to be a very good team.

This summer, in addition to conditioning for the competitive trail ride, Laura and Stormy were first in saddleseat equitation junior riders and third in saddleseat pleasure horse classes at the Dauphin County 4-H Fair. They also placed in those classes at the district level. They were also reserve champion in the gaming division of the three show series of fun shows held by the Capitol Area Therapeutic Riding Association.

Laura Theurer became high point junior rider at the Keystone Ride.

Mifflin Farm Bureau Meets

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

MCVEYTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — When Mifflin County Farm Bureau members met for their annual meeting at the McVeytown Fire Hall recently, they were asked to flex their grass-roots muscles in an urgent call for change.

The board needed the bylaws changed. The beekeepers needed help in eradicating varroa and tracheal mites.

Some hoped to decrease road damage caused by horseshoes. All needed to know how the Homestead exemption referendum would affect their taxes.

"Vote 'yes' on the Homestead Exemption Act in the November election," said Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Director Wayne Freeman. Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) sees passage of this referendum as a major step toward efficient and fair local taxation. Under the current tax law, PFB believes senior citizens, farmers, and others with fixed incomes shoulder more than their fair share of the tax burden.

After some discussion, the group voted to change sections of the bylaws concerning quorum at board meetings. Previously, half of the board members were needed to conduct business. Now only three or more must be present.

Freeman commended Mifflin County's superb efforts in membership under the leadership of Ken Loht of McClure. He presented the county with a Safemark co-op check for $528.28. Ken Loht accepted a check on behalf of the local organization for $200 for reaching membership goal. Freeman said exciting new membership benefits through Nationwide Insurance are about to be unveiled.

MCFB president Mark Ellinger presented legislative news. Elrose Glick presented awards to Helen Kirk as county information director/county newsletter editor; Carrie Stufft as Ag In The Classroom coordinator; Dennis Strock as MCFB spokesperson at the voag school in Lewistown; and Ken Loht as membership chairman.

Glick said the newly established P & E committee accomplished two of its goals so far, including a brochure for new members and a video that drew a lot of attention at the Mifflin County Youth Fair in August.

Policy recommendations were presented by Frank Bonson. One addressed the issue of using formic acid to control varroa and tracheal mites on honey bees. Two addressed the problem of road damage by horsehoes. Another encouraged support for the Homestead Exemption while another served as a "wake-up" call for those in dairy industry managerial positions.

Mark Ellinger was re-elected president. Frank Bonson will serve as vice president. Orville Heister, Kent Spicher, Frank Bonson, and Bill Wingert were elected to the board.

Angus World To Gather

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Leaders of the Angus world will gather in Sydney, Australia, October 27-29, for the seventh World Angus Forum.

American Angus Association President Bill Wilson, Cloverdale, Ind., will lead a delegation of Angus breeders and enthusiasts to the world event.

The World Angus Forum is held every four years by a host country. The Forum includes a formal meeting of the World Aberdeen-Angus Secretariat, the official international organization of Angus registry associations, and an industry program on topics of special interest to registered Angus breeders. The last forum was hosted by the American Angus Association in 1993 in St. Joseph, Mo. and Rapid City, S.D.

Topics of global interest will be covered in the program by international representatives. Included will be discussions of the global beef industry and the production of high quality beef for the growing Asian markets.

Several American Angus representatives will be on the Forum program. Henry Bergfeld of Summitcrest Farms, Summitville, Ohio, will outline Summitcrest's program to genetically improve the carcass traits of Angus cattle.

In addition, Richard L. "Dick" Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association, will speak on Angus genetics and the future of the Angus breed around the world. Branded beef programs and marketing branded beef will be discussed by Louis "Mick" Colvin, executive director of the American Angus Association's Certified Angus Beef Program. John Crouch, director of performance programs, will lead technical sessions on the application of performance-based beef selection programs, and Keith Evans, director of communications will speak on effective seed stock marketing.

"We are pleased that the Angus world looks to the American Angus Association as an innovator in many areas of Angus production and marketing," said Bill Wilson, association president. Wilson, along with Dick Spader, will be the official delegates to the Secretariat meeting.

Following the Forum, the Australian Angus Society has planned a 10-day tour to visit many of the important Angus herds, and travel through the most concentrated Angus producing areas of Australia.

Information on the World Forum and the various tours is available from the American Angus Association, (816) 233-3101 or on its web-site, http://www.angus.org.

Nutrient Management: Solutions For The Environment And The Swine Producer

Finding a balance between profitable management solutions and the needs of the environment will be a formidable task for the swine producer. Last week, we discussed how the National Pork Producers Council's Environmental Assurance Program is a valuable resource for producers when tackling the nutrient management. With the passage of the Nutrient Management Law in Pennsylvania, the environment and nutrient management have become "hot" issues. This article is intended to review the basics as well as update you on some of the emerging concepts in nutrient management.

What is nutrient management? Nutrient management is more than just proper manure handlilng. Recycling. This word is not restricted to your household aluminum cans and newspapers, but encompasses your farm nutrients as well. Nutrient management is the efficient utilization and recycling of nutrients through every aspect of the farm including animal nutrition, cropping, and of course, manure handling.

Nutrients flow through a farm or production system as part of a cycle (see diagram). Nutrients are stored in animals, manure, soil, and crops. Inputs into the cycle include feed, new animals, fertilizer, or via naural processes such as fixation. Nutrients can leave the cycle as desirable marketable farm products such as pork, or as undesirable by-products such as environmental pollutants resulting from runoff and leeching. This undesirable loss of nutrients to the environment can add unnecessary cost to an operation by having to buy the fertilizer needed to replace these lost nutrients. Contamination of the surface and ground water supplies by these excess nutrients can affect the health of both humans and animals. The bottom line is producers can reduce the loss of nutrients to the environment by improving the efficiency with which nutrients are recycled.

The "Whole Farm Approach" to nutrient management is a theory which integrates each phase of the nutrient cycle into the management scheme. Coordination of feeding, cropping, and manure handling are needed to optimize nutrient flow in swine production systems. Furthermore, with specialized agricultural enterprises such as are common in the swine industry, the "Whole Farm Approach" may have to extend beyond the boundaries of a single farm to adequately coordinate feeding, cropping, manure handling complete the cycle. We anticipate that regional or cooperative approaches to nutrient management will prove to be some of most cost effective practices for the producers. For instance, a swine producer, who has an excess of manure for the acreage he owns, could team up with an outside cropping enterprise to efficiently utilize the nutrients. As you begin to evaluate you management practices, you need to examine each of these phases for ways to increase your nutrient recycling.

In the animal nutrition and feeding phase of the cycle, the rations should be formulated to meet the nutritional requirements of the pigs as closely as possible to reduce the amount of excess nutrients excreted in the manure. Formulating a ration to always meet the requirements of rapidly growing pigs is almost impossible. However, by increasing the number of rations fed to your nursery and grow/finish pigs, you can more often meet the needs of the pigs and thus reduce excess nutrients. This is often called phase feeding. Furthermore, diets can be better matched to the needs of the growing animals if the hogs are separated by sex. You may recognize this as split sex feeding. Another simple and economical way to reduce excess nitrogen excretion by pigs is through the use of synthetic amino acids such as lysine. Traditionally, soybean meal has been used as the primary protein source in swine diets. Most rations are formulated to meet to the requirement of the amino acid, lysine making it the first limiting amino acid. Other amino acids in the diet are often in excess of the animal's requirement. Supplementing with synthetic lysine allows for a reduction in the total amount of soybean meal and crude protein in a swine diet. The subsequent reduction in crude protein results in a decrease in the amount of nitrogen excreted and potentially lost to the environment. Another example of environmentally-friendly dietary supplementation uses a new technology, the enzyme phytase. Phytase increases the bioavailability of phosphorus in plant matter by liberating previous unavailable phosphorus that was bound to phytate. Phytase reduces the need for supplementation of inorganic phosphorus and thus reduces overall phosphorus excretion.

The management practices mentioned in this article are just a few of the choices that a producer has when developing a nutrient management strategy. The Environmental Assurance Program can help you evaluate your operation, indicate areas for improvement, and direct you toward the professional assistance you need. If you are interested in participating in this program, please contact Kelli Monahan, Nutrient Management Summer Fellow, New Bolton Center at (610) 444-5800 ext 2345 to schedule your farm visit.

Stayed tuned for next week's article. The third and final part of this series will focus on completing the nutrient cycle: cropping strategies and selected best management practices for manure handling will be discussed.

Pa. Fairs Attempt To Build Judge Lists

For several years, Pennsylvania fairs and livestock shows have been working without an official list of livestock judges. The judges list is being renewed currently, and the purpose of the Pennsylvania Livestock Judge's Registration form is to:

1) provide current information on prospective livestock judges to fair/show officials and superintendents,

2) periodically update and inform judges on recent developments and changes in youth livestock project programming, and, 3) provide the opportunity for livestock judges to attend educational programs (improving livestock evaluation skills, ethics training, fitting, showing, merit scoring, Danish system, systems approach to evaluation, etc.).

Information obtained from prospective livestock judges will be retained in a database. Keith A. Bryan (coordinator, Pennsylvania Livestock Judges List) and Ronald C. Miller (administrator, PA Agricultural Fair Program) will oversee development and distribution of the list, in consultation with officials at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and steering committee members of the Pennsylvania Code of Ethics Program for Animal Exhibitions.

ANTIBIOTICS DAMAGE THE IMMUNE SYSTEM
Vitamix FEEDS THE IMMUNE SYSTEM
You Can Sell The Milk
When You Use Vitamix Instead Of Antibiotics

Vitamix is for every contagious disease & every kind of infection. Support the immune system their lives depend on it.

You can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix. Vitamix is a mixture of vitamins, minerals, enzymes, electrolytes, and proteins, especially calculated to feed the immune system. Vitamix is the result of over 20 years research and over 20,000 feeding experiments. Vitamix ingredients are so micro pulverized and easily digestible that some of them melt in the mouth and are absorbed into the bloodstream while the cow is still chewing her feed. Her organs increase the output of antibodies (white cells) within minutes, and can often double the output of antibodies within one hour after consuming Vitamix, and you can get Vitamix without a prescription. Vitamix is all natural. You just put Vitamix in the feed whenever there are symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

The cow's immune system can cure any and every kind of contagious disease and infection quicker, safer, more consistently than any medical drug in the world when you support the immune system. The immune system is the only real defense. I keep cows and horses for feeding experiments.The last tlme I used an antibiotic was in 1984 and haven't lost a cow, calf or horse since I quit using antibiotics.

Any time any human or animal gets a contagious disease or any kind of infection, it is for one reason, and one reason only; The immune system failed to do an adequate job of defending against it. In other words, the immune system let you down.

Every time you use antibiotics, sulfa drug or an immune stimulator; you weaken the immune system. See the Physicians Desk Reference (PDR) for more information on the side effects of antibiotics. The information in the PDR was provided by the drug companies that make the drugs as required by law.

Shouldn't we be feeding the immune system instead? Support the immune system. Their lives and health depend on it. Feed Vitamix every time for every contagious disease or infection.

Vitamix is the best procedure in the world for Mastitis. It is quick and easy and you can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix.

How long does it take when you take the "Support the immune system approach?" I have seen calves that were down, had high fever, bloody scours and were dehydrated. One needed help to hold its head up. The only thing I gave them was Vitamix and water. In three hours, I had to run them down and get them cornered to give the Vitamix. Dairymen tell me that Vitamix is faster than anything else they ever used.

When there is a serious case of anything contagious or infectious; I give Vitamix once an hour for three hours, or until they are back on their feed and doing noticeably better. I continue Vitamix six times daily for a few days. Vitamix typically costs only $2 to $3 a day for a cow (less for a calf). The total cost for one cow for one illness is typically $8 to $10 from start to finish.

Vitamix costs less than antibiotics, and you can get it without a prescription. Vitamix is completely drug free!!! You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix!!! (When you use antibiotics, you pour the milk out for 5 days, sometimes more. You risk making a mistake and pouring all your milk out for 5 days or more.)

You save money Every Time you use Vitamix. Get some Vitamix now to keep on hand. Use Vitamix as soon as you see symptoms of anything contagious or infectious. You will know you did the right thing within hours.

Preventing and curing all contagious disease and infections boils down to this. Increasing the capacity to produce white cells (Antibodies). All white cells are made by the bone marrow. Antibiotics cause "bone marrow depression" thereby reducing its ability to make white cells to fight diseases and infection (See Physician's Desk Reference Book [PDR]).

I have done over 20,000 feeding experiments on healing the body, and have yet to find an incurable contagious disease or infection.

Why sit around waiting for a miracle? You can order Vitamix right now. Miracles are great and they do happen now and then; if you wait around one might happen for you. But the immune system is a miracle. You can order Vitamix today and keep it on hand, then you will have it when you need it.

Vitamix ...when you need a miracle. The best source of information about Vitamix is people who have used it. Ask a friend about Vitamix.

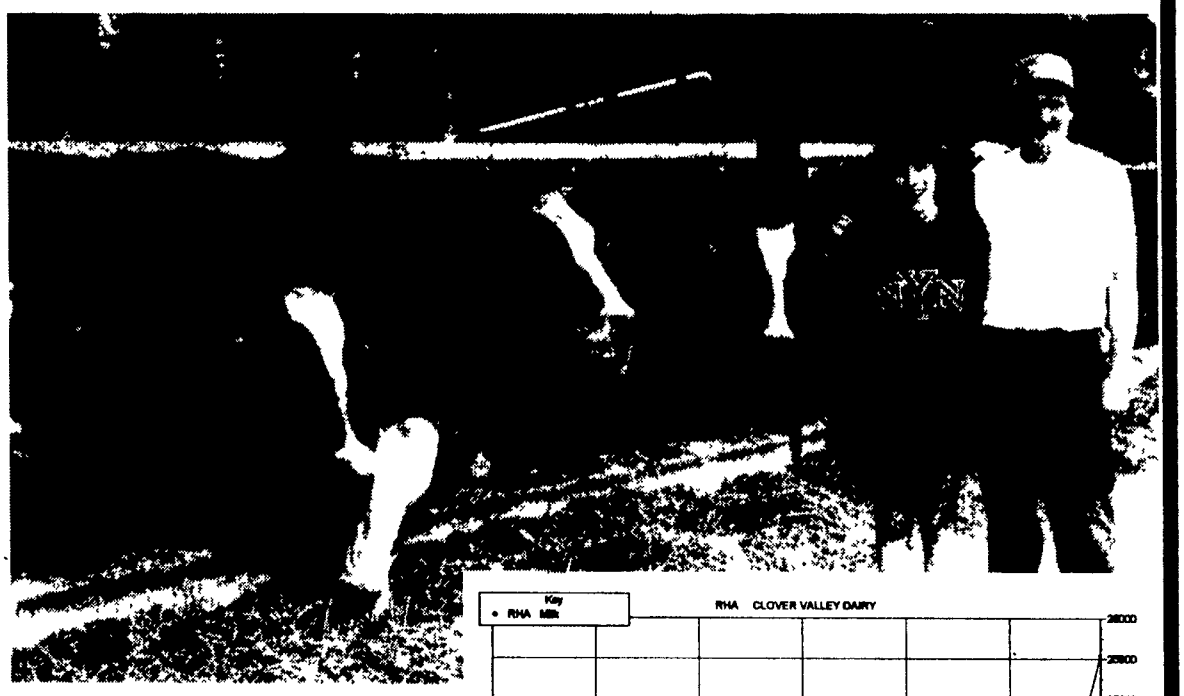
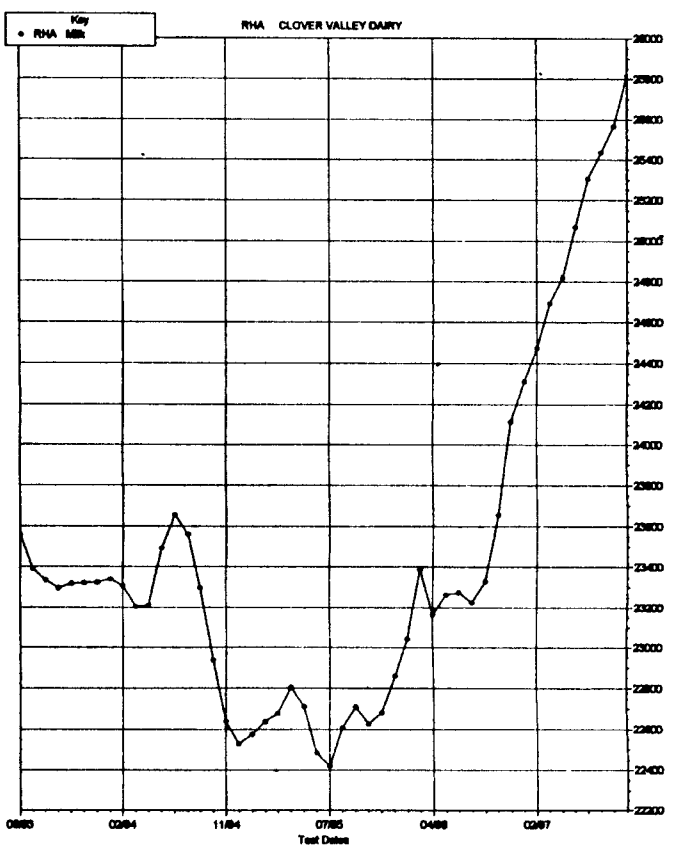
Improving THE BOTTOM LINE

DOES THE AIM™ TECHNOLOGY HAVE A PLACE IN THE HIGH PRODUCING COMMODITY ORIENTED DAIRY FARM?





YOU BET IT DOES!

Fred and Kathy Wainwright operate Clover Valley Dairy in Florence, NJ milking in excess of 300 cows. Fred started using the AIM Technology in September of 1996 and since that time his RHA has gone from 23,200 to its current level of 25,800 milk (2X).

"The complementary blend of all plant proteins in the AIM Technology provides a consistent high quality amino acid profile. We have used the AIM Technology and an extruded soybean product to replace distillers grains and fish meal. This aides me in achieving my goal of meeting my bypass protein needs from a wide range of sources. In addition to my own herd, I do ration work for a number of area producers and the AIM Technology is a great asset in working with these producers to meet their performance goals. In today's dairy economy a product has to perform for me to consider using it. I can't afford something that doesn't earn its keep. The AIM Technology has met and exceeded my needs and expectations."

Nutrition is never the sole reason results like these are achieved. Fred has used BST since it was first approved, beds with sand, has well ventilated facilities, never lets the cows see an empty bunk, provides quality water easily accessible and does all of the other things top managers do to achieve results such as these.

The AIM Technology has earned its way in this top producing herd with the kind of results that are needed in today's dairy economy. Contact your Mater Mix Feeds Rep today to see how the AIM Technology can fit into your program.

Meat Animal Producers Must Maximize Lean

WOOSTER, Ohio — Maximizing lean and minimizing fat in meat animals needs to be a primary objective of meat animal producers.

Ohio State University's Ken McClure works on strategies that will help produce leaner lambs.

McClure works in the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center's Animal Sciences Department. He said lambs fed concentrate have high daily accretion of lean — meaning they put on more meat each day, but they also tend to yield carcasses with high amounts of fat.

"We need to capitalize on the lean in young animals and try to retain that lean," McClure said.

Trenbolone acetate-estradiol benzoate (TBA) is a growth promotant approved for cattle, but not yet approved for sheep. It was used in an experiment with 48 wether lambs as a a research tool to maintain their ability to increase lean meat until market weight was achieved.

The experiment measured how effective TBA was when dietary crude protein was fed at both National Research Council recommended crude protein level and at a higher crude protein level. "We used concentrate feeding and the TBA implant as an attempt to retain leanness and minimize fat in half of the lambs," McClure said. "We also measured how effective TBA was when dietary protein was increased and compared that to the other group."

Half of the lambs in each protein group were ear-implanted with TBA. They were fed an all-concentrate diet of shelled corn and a pelleted supplement.

McClure found the feed efficiency was better for the implanted lambs than those growing at their own pace. The average daily gain was higher in those lambs implanted with TBA.

"We used TBA as a tool to measure lamb performance and to determine whether additional protein in the diet was needed," he said. "To support increased lean accretion in TBA implanted lambs, more dietary protein may be necessary."

McClure said this work can also benefit other ruminant animal industries. "I see this research as a benefit to producers — not solely because TBA could someday be approved for use in sheep, but because it provides another way to produce lean meat. And that's the business we're in — to produce lean."

He presented his research at the national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science in Nashville, Tenn. July 28 to Aug. 1.

Steel To Open State Grange Convention

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The president of the Pennsylvania State Grange will open the 125th edition of the Pennsylvania State Grange convention by reviewing the past year's accomplishments while offering a vision toward the future to over 1,000 Grangers during the first full day of the State Session on Oct. 27.

The Pennsylvania State Grange convention runs Oct. 25-29 in Reading, Berks Co. The convention is being hosted by the 12 Granges in Berks County.

Steel said one of the strengths of the Pennsylvania State Grange, with over 30,000 members, is its legislative branch and grass-roots policies that govern the Grange and influence decisions on Capitol Hill. "It is in Grange meetings where good legislation has had its beginnings," Steel said. "And where it will continue to influence our legislators as we protect Grange interests while serving the agricultural and rural communities."

Legislative accomplishments in 1997 include: testified and successful in raising the over-order premium for dairy farms through the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board; indemnification funding for avian influenza; secured agricultural research funding in state budget; and assisted in the creation of the Ag Law Center at the Dickinson School of Law, to name a few.

"Because our membership is so diverse in nature we strive to work for all areas of interest including agriculture, rural transportation, rural education, health insurance, and much more," Steel said. "Grange influence and integrity remain high, and we must continue to expand our list of legislative accomplishments while maintaining our vigilance in Harrisburg and Washington."

Steel said the accomplishments of the past with a vision toward the future will guide the organization as the Grange continues to tackle issues facing our communities and the agricultural industry.

As a grass-roots organization, policies are formulated at the local and county level and then passed to the state Grange in the form of a resolution. Once passed, the resolution becomes Grange policy and those policies, which have federal implications, are submitted for consideration at the National Grange convention in November. There are 90 resolutions that will be discussed at the convention. Some issues facing this year's delegate body are: the local tax reform referendum, the Clean Air Act, land issues including eminent domain and nutrient management, and health insurance increases for small business owners.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, with over 30,000, is an agricultural and rural organization dedicated to improving the lives of Pennsylvanians through community service, legislative affairs and offering member services.

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve Dale and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms - Towville NY

Mr Farney is talking about mixing 11 5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration "

The Farney s herd average is up about 1,000 lbs , and they have a higher protein test as well They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor

3000 Reel Auggie TMR Mixers
Now available in seven sizes

CLAAS - The Dependable One

This year's corn silage harvest is almost over and once again Claas harvesters proved their value. Of the 24 Claas harvesters we've sold, the longest down time any of them had this year was 1/2 day!

That 1/2 day problem happened to a custom operator who ran over a hidden well casing while opening a field. The Claas harvester can chop right through wood - but a well casing will stop it. If you have an obstruction in your field, mark it with a flag.

We will have a demonstration with the New MF 8680 conventional Combine on Oct. 23 and 24. Please call for time and location.

Customer Comments

- FORAGE BOXES I would not own another brand forage box- built & designed for strength - the most smooth unloading box I have ever seen - simple to replace variable speed belt when needed.
- V-TWIN SPREADERS I've had other brand spreaders that would jam up with pen packed manure. No problems with this H&S spreader. Excellent unit for topdressing pen packed manure after cuttings of hay. Come back next cutting & you never knew you hauled manure on the field. It just rips it to shreds.
- BOX-TYPE SPREADERS Full length frame - no pulling off of the box. T-Rod chain - it is the heavy weight of box-type spreader
- BI-FOLD RAKES I never raked so fast in my life - Really gentle on the hay, well built unit - I would not want to do a cutting of hay without it.

JUST RECEIVED: * 2 more forage boxes on 12 ton gears
1 - USED DION 16' w/roof on 10 Ton Gear

NATIONAL LIVESTOCK SHOW CODE OF CONDUCT (part 5 of 5) - SUMMARY

You can learn more about a person in an hour of play than in a year of conversation -- Plato

The previous four articles described the proposed National Livestock Show Code of Conduct as presented to attendees at the Second National Youth Livestock Program Ethics Symposium Part one of this series (published Saturday, September 20) provided some background information and the preamble for the show ring code of ethics Part two (published Saturday, September 27) was an overview of the guidelines of the code that included guidelines 1 through 5 Part three (published Saturday, tion of the guidelines of the code that included guidelines 6 through 17 Part four (published Saturday, October 11) included a description of the National Livestock Code of Conduct and the composition and authority of a proposed Oversight Committee Part five, this article, will include a summary of the highlights of the code

As the steering committee for the Pennsylvania Code of Ethics for Animal Exhibitions moves forward toward implementation of a uniform set of guidelines for adoption and use in Pennsylvania, opinions and comments regarding these guidelines and codes will help to shape future versions Responsible comment is invited and welcome, and should be directed to Keith A Bryan, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802, to be forwarded to the committee

The National Livestock Show Code of Conduct was developed as a draft document Information from a variety of sources was compiled to arrive at this version, in order to develop national standards that would be acceptable to all participants. There are several items that were not covered in other documents that the national committee thought were important and need to be addressed prior to finalizing this document, including:

a Transportation to, and from, the fairgrounds or exhibits, loading and unloading

b. Housing and care at the fairgrounds or exhibit

c. Mechanism to prevent the penalized exhibitor, etc from , local or another state A National the 1996 Youth Ethics Program, with funding to keep it current.

There may be other items that need to be addressed

Several key points have been described throughout the previous four articles, and should be readdressed

1 This code of ethics applies to anyone exhibiting animals at livestock shows in the United States It includes Junior as well as open class exhibitors who compete in structured classes

2 This "National Livestock Show Code of Conduct" will be enhanced with additional rules and regulations which individual fairs and livestock shows impose on the local county, state, regional, and national levels

3 There is a comprehensive listing of broadly worded practices or procedures that are unacceptable and are defined as being deceptive, fraudulent, unethical, and inhumane in the care, fitting, preparation and showing of all classes of livestock

4 Responsibility for adherence to the code and all of its rights, privileges, and limitations rests solely with owners, exhibitors, fitters, trainers, and absolutely responsible persons

5. The 17 rules in the code clearly define expectations for ownership, animal health, previous sale, primary care, drug residues and licensed veterinary care, non-veterinary treatments, handling practices, limitations to surgical procedures, fitting and showing guidelines, conduct during the show, consequences of violation of the code, knowledge of the code, responsibility, and the finality of decisions made by show management.

6. Suggested wording for the entry form that refers to "The National Livestock Show Code of Conduct" and requiring signatures from both the junior exhibitor and parent/guardian.

7 Suggestions for the composition and authority of an oversight committee, with appropriate course of action for violations

The best summary for this series of articles is contained in the Preamble For The Show Ring Code Of Ethics Of The American Livestock Show And Rodeo Manager's Association Letter To Exhibitors

It is the intent of the livestock show management to provide each and every exhibitor an atmosphere of competitive spirit that promotes an educational experience, as well as honesty and integrity As an exhibitor you have spent countless hours caring for your animals Through this project you have gained knowledge in animal husbandry that includes selection, genetics, nutrition, health, fitting, showing, economics and marketing. Hopefully, you are developing life skills such as communication, leadership, cooperation, discipline, responsibility and financial management. By participating in this competitive event, you are putting your had work and effort on display before judges who will evaluate your livestock Each of you are also on display as a representative of your respective organization The general public views 4-H and FFA as organization that teach you, our future leaders of agriculture.

It should give each and every one of you the utmost satisfaction knowing they are entering this event with a clear conscience that you did your best, and will walk away with more knowledge than you had coming into this competition. Experience is a valuable teacher. It allows each of you to gain knowledge, and enables you to improve each time you participate in any type of function, whether it is livestock or non-livestock related. The livestock show management strives to provide each participant an opportunity for a positive educational experience, and the potential to enjoy competitive excellence. Remember that the choices you make today will determine what you will have, be, and do in the tomorrow's of your lives.

The management of this livestock show expects each exhibitor to perform their own work and present an honest animal for competition to the best of their ability There is no place for individuals that incorporate deception, dishonesty, cheating, or sacrifice the humane treatment of animals for the cost of winning at this show Cheating defeats the purposes of the livestock show, which is to teach animal husbandry and to improve the genetic pool Those exhibitors who choose not to follow the rules and guidelines of the livestock show will not be allowed to participate

Remember the creeds of your 4-H and FFA organizations, as well as "National Livestock Show Code of Conduct". You are a representative of over one million young people who are privileged to participate in fairs and livestock shows throughout the United States, and each person needs to uphold the integrity of the youth programs you represent Above all, be honest with yourself and fellow livestock exhibitors.

Livestock Show Management expresses to each and everyone of you, best wishes during our show We hope the experiences you gain will be positive, educational, and challenge you to continue to improve their skills in animal husbandry, provide you an understanding atmosphere of sportsmanship, and help to promote honesty and integrity in everything you do.

Our goals for livestock shows and exhibitions should always be to provide each and every exhibitor an atmosphere of competitive spirit that promotes an educational experience, as well as honesty and integrity. The experiences each of us gain should be positive, educational, and challenge us to continue to improve our skills in animal husbandry, provide us an understanding atmosphere of sportsmanship, and help to promote honesty and integrity in everything we do

The reserve champion heifer, HWF Gina, was shown by Haven Wood Farms, Stoneboro. Haven Wood Farms, is a 250-head beef operation owned by H. Robert McQuiston and managed by herdsman David Downs.

The champion senior was shown by Shane Smithson, White Hall, Md. The Smithsons' Pond View Farm is a 100-head beef operation. Their entry, Simme Valley Finesse, was also champion of both the 4-H and open shows. Finesse was champion at the Pennsylvania Field Day and reserve champion at the Maryland State Fair. She was champion at the Eastern National 4-H Show and champion in the 4-H division at the Maryland State Fair. This past June she placed seventh overall at the Eastern National Junior Regional Simmental Association Show.

Smithson, 13, is an eighth grader at North Harford Middle School, who enjoys basketball and 4-H and wants eventually to be a professional fitter. Finesse was purchased by Smithson at last year's KILE from Ken and Jean White, Simme Valley Farm, Groton, N.Y. Last year, Finesse was junior champion and calf champion in the open show.

Reserve senior champion heifer went to Tammy Nelson, Forest Hill, Md., for her February heifer, Harvest Misty Moon. Nelson, daughter of Debbie and Steve Nelson, is a senior at North Harford High School, where she is involved in 4-H and FFA. She hopes to work in some area of agriculture. This senior champion was last year's calf champion.

Grand champion Limousin bull was shown by Corleland and Cattle.

Proteins Send Pregnancy Signal

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Three proteins, key to maintaining pregnancy in cows and sheep, have been identified by University of Missouri-Columbia animal scientists.

The proteins, called interferon-tau, signal to the mother she's pregnant. Without the signal, pregnancies fail, costing the livestock industry billions in dollars each year in lost production efficiency.

The Missouri researchers are increasing quantities of the pregnancy-signal proteins using recombinant DNA methods. The protein are grown inside bacteria, then collected for injection into cows and sheep at the second week of pregnancy.

In cattle and sheep, only one-half to two-thirds get pregnant each time they are bred, the University of Missouri researchers said in their report to the Midwest Section of the American Society of Animal Sciences. The egg gets fertilized, they said, but the embryo doesn't survive the first month because the mother doesn't get the message she's pregnant. As a result, the uterine environment is not friendly toward the new embryo, and it dies.

Involved in the research are Gail Winkelman, Alan Ealy, Duane Keisler, and Michael Roberts. Winkelman, an undergraduate, and Ealy, a post-doctoral student, identified the proteins. Keisler has used similar proteins to improve embryonic survival in sheep. Roberts, world famous for his interferon research, was the first to identify the role of interferons in pregnancy maintenance more than 10 years ago.

"As we learn more about these proteins, we should be able to supply these to animals and save costly embryonic losses," Ealy said. "Dr. Keisler's studies with sheep showed this is possible."

Winkelman said the proteins she identified are produced by the trophoblast cells that later become the placenta.

As the interferons are produced in quantity, they will be tested on sheep and cows. "Sheep are easier and less costly to conduct preliminary studies, on, because they reproduce so often," Ealy said. "But the biggest payoff is in cows. Cows are easy to inject, and the payoff to the dairy and beef industries in increased milk and meat production efficiency would be enormous."

Pa. Horse Show Hosts 'Junior Weekend'

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Junior weekend at the 52nd annual Pennsylvania National Horse Show had favorites and long shots winning blue ribbons and top honors at this prestigious indoor horse show.

Junior jumper riders culminated their season with the Prix des States Team Championship, sponsored by the Black Entertainment Television and the American Horse Show Association.

The four high-point junior jumper riders from each of the 10 U.S. zones and Canada competed as a team over two courses of jumps, 3 feet 9 inches to 4 feet 9 inches in height, with spreads of 4 feet to 5 feet.

The Zone X team from California consisted of Elise Haas, Jill Prieto, Stephanie McCarron, and Blakely Wickstrom. Zone X had won this class every year since 1993, and both Haas and Wickstrom had been members of last year's winning team, so Zone X was strongly favored to win again.

After the first round, they were leading, having just .25 of a time fault, while Zone II (Pa., N.J., and N.Y.) had the next lowest score of four faults.

In the second round, things began to change. The Zone II riders, Heather Caristo, Mary Daily Pattee, and Rebecca VanSlyke each rode fault free rounds, which meant that their fourth member, Amanda Forte, didn't have to jump a second round, as the worst score from each team was dropped. That allowed Zone II to finish on their four faults from the first round.

Meanwhile, Zone X members made uncharacteristic errors, and added another 12 faults to their score, to finish in second place overall. Zone 1 (Conn., Mass., Maine, N.H., R.I., Vt.) and Zone VIII (Ariz., Calif. and Minn.) tied for third with 16 faults.

For Sunday's Hunter Seat Medal National Finals, 18-year-old Lauren Bass of Willoughby Hills, Ohio, was the insider's favorite. After 200 competitors from 30 states and Canada had completed the first course, Bass was also the judge's favorite. Now she and 29 other riders had to jump a second course. Her trainer, Jeff Vogel, thought that coming into the second round on top was "the kiss of death." Even Bass felt the pressure, and told her mother, "I wish somebody else was better than me!"

However, Bass rode her second course as efficiently and stylishly as her first. But it still wasn't over.

The judges, Cindy Hankins, herself a former winner of this class, and Ronnie Beard, called four riders back for a final test. Joining Bass were Erin Ballard of Canada, Lindsey Phibbs of Perryburg, Ohio, and Lourdes DeGuardiola of West Palm Beach, Fla.

The four were called into the arena where the announcer gave them explicit directions for the 3rd course. They were escorted from the ring, and returned one at a time to perform, without being able to conference with their trainer, or even watch their fellow competitors.

It was Bass and her consistency over the three rounds that impressed the judges the most. Bass won the class and put her name into the equestrian history books. Historically, the winners of the Eisers & Pessoa AHSA Hunter Seat Medal National Finals have gone on to compete for the United States Equestrian Team in national and international competition. Bass is planning on focusing on the jumpers, but is also planning on attending college to study environmental science and business. "Horses," she said, "will always be a way of life for me."

Finishing in second was Ballard. Third place went to Phibbs, and DeGuardiola was fourth.
